3:1 There are differing interpretations on the meaning of the term "Agagite." One view suggests that this was a descendant of Agag who was at one time king of the Amalekites (1 Sam. 15:8). Although the passage in First Samuel states that the Amalekites were annihilated, it is evident that this refers only to those who were in that vicinity (see 1 Sam. 30:1 and the note on 1 Chr. 4:43). The Amalekites were a nomadic people who roamed in clans, and the slaughter accomplished by Saul probably was only concerned with one group of these people. Others believe that later in the book, "Agagite" is mentioned in close connection with the idea that this was an enemy of the Jews (Esth. 3:10; 9:24). In light of this, some deduce that "Agagite" (literally, "fiery one") was used to refer to a contemptible or hateful person.

3:7 Here the lot was cast systematically by days and months in order to determine which date in particular would be best to destroy the Jews. In verse thirteen it is seen that specifically the thirteenth day of the twelfth month was chosen. The Feast of Purim, the Jewish Feast commemorating the events of the Book of Esther, takes its name from this practice.

The Book of

JOB

The Book of Job is one of the few books in the Hebrew Scriptures that does not derive its title from the first word in the text. The name is a transliteration of the Hebrew name 'Ĭyyōv (347) which means "the hated or persecuted one."

The events related in the Book of Job are generally believed to have taken place during the patriarchal period. No reference is made to the events of the Exodus, and the patriarchal name for God, "the Almighty," is used approximately thirty times in the book. The fact that Job acted as the priest for his family (Job 1:5) implies that the Mosaic Law had not yet been given. The length of Job's life (Job 42:16) is comparable to those living during the time of the patriarchs (Gen. 25:7; 35:28).

Although there is no mention of the author's name within the book, most scholars accept the Talmudic tradition that Moses is the author of the book. There are others who propose that Solomon was the author. They suggest that Solomon's vast knowledge of foreign countries and cultures would have provided him with the information to write the Book of Job. This fails to prove that only Solomon could have written the book, for Moses, having received the highest training in Egypt, would also have learned of numerous foreign nations. However, the main problem with the Solomonic view of authorship is the time span that separated the patriarchal period from Solomon's lifetime. On the other hand, Mosaic authorship is supported by the use of many words and phrases found in the Book of Job which are also used in the Pentateuch. Another argument in favor of this view is that the land of Uz was adjacent to Midian where Moses spent forty years prior to his return to Egypt. It seems entirely possible that he could have heard the story of Job there and been inspired by God to correctly relate the events and conversations that occurred. It is generally accepted that Moses dwelled in Midian between the years of 1485 and 1445 B.C.

The Book of Job is the first of the so–called Poetical Books of the Old Testament. The truth is, however, that poetry is found throughout the Old Testament. For example, it is used in blessings and cursings (Gen. 49:2–27), in certain historical accounts (Ex. 15:1–18), and in dirges (2 Sam. 1:19–27). The poetry of the Old Testament is very different from modern poetry. It involves not the rhyming of sounds, but the "rhyming" of thoughts or ideas. This characteristic of Hebrew poetry is now called parallelism. For the most part, parallelism may either be antithetical (where the thoughts are opposite to one another, Prov. 10:1, 7) or synonymous (where the thoughts are the same as or similar to one another, Ps. 24:1). Since rhymes of sound are difficult, if not impossible, to carry over in translation, the appreciation of English poetry is limited to those who know the language. On the other hand, the beauty of the "thought–rhythm" of Hebrew poetry may be carried over into any language.

The Book of Job is a beautiful example of Hebrew poetry, though in fact not all of the book is poetic in form. The prologue (chaps. 1, 2) and the epilogue (Job 42:7–16) are written in prose. The drama of Job's suffering, the majestic style in which it is written, and the nature of the discussions have helped to make Job universally accepted as a literary masterpiece.

The purpose of the book is to show the benevolence of God and the unfathomable wisdom of His providence, even in the trials brought upon His children. It also explains why God allows righteous people to suffer: to expose their frailty and sinfulness, to strengthen their faith, and to purify them. The spiritual perspective of the account and the fact that God exercised total control over Satan promotes complete trust in God.

Throughout the book, Job's friends relentlessly accuse him of having committed some great sin. Although he questioned God's actions in the midst of these onslaughts, it should not be assumed that his queries were motivated by a resentful, self-seeking attitude. On the contrary, they confirm his determination to hold on to his faith in God despite the circumstances that providence had brought upon him.

1:1 The land of Uz was located most likely between the city of Damascus and the Euphrates River. It most certainly was near the area occupied by the Sabeans and the Chaldeans. These were marauding bands of people who lived in close proximity to Job, at least close enough to wage an attack against him (Job 1:15, 17). This would place Uz near the modern-day boundary between the countries of Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

1:6–12 There is a controversy over this passage as to whether or not Satan was allowed to come before God's throne in heaven. It is clear in these verses that Satan came along with the "sons of God" to present himself before God. If these "sons of God" are in fact angelic beings, it is plausible to state that Satan appeared in heaven. The fact that Satan is not omnipresent is proven by the fact that he was said to have been "going to and fro in the earth." Another interesting truth that may be gleaned from this passage is that Satan is not free to act in the affairs of mankind. In verses ten through twelve Satan had to ask God to remove the protective "hedge" from around Job. If God does not remove His protection from His people, Satan can have no influence on them or their lives. Consequently, Satan cannot cause affliction nor can he cause a person to commit sin. Satan must submit himself to whatever God chooses to do.

1:9–11 From the question, "Doth Job fear God for naught?" it is evident that Satan was challenging the motive behind Job's worship and service to God. Satan wanted to show that Job lived as he did because God had blessed him. This was not the case, for Job served the Lord from the heart. God's purpose in allowing these trials to come on Job was to purify and strengthen Job's faith in Him. God judges men on the motives behind their actions, and not merely the actions themselves (Eph. 6:5, 6; Heb. 4:12).

1:13 This verse marks the beginning of the sufferings of Job. Some would suggest that Scripture teaches that believers will suffer, even though they are living godly lives. However, this is not true of the Christian life, nor of Job's situation. The Scriptures explicitly state that the righteous will be blessed in both this life and in that which is to come (1 Tim. 4:8; 1 Pet. 3:10–12). This is the norm for the believers who live uprightly. The thing that is often forgotten about Job's life is that he had been blessed abundantly before this time of testing, and that he was even more richly blessed as a result of the endurance of that suffering. There are times, however, that God sees fit to test the believer (as in the case of Job) for the purpose of strengthening and purifying his faith.

1:16–18 The phrase, "while he was yet speaking," indicates that all the events took place one right after the other. This afforded Job no opportunity to prepare himself or regain his composure, making each one harder to bear. It is evident from the text that Job had realized there was a possibility of trouble coming into his life, and that his worst fears would become a reality. Thus, Job never took any of the blessings of God for granted (Job 3:25, 26).

1:16 The question that arises from this verse is "did God actively participate in the temptation of Job?" It is obvious that God Himself does not have to satisfy any request that Satan makes, but He does allow Satan to afflict Job, knowing that Job's faith would in fact be strengthened (see the note on Job 1:9–11). There are several noted scholars who interpret the phrase "the fire of God is fallen from heaven," as a suggestion that this was the action of Satan himself, and that God, who was not actively involved in tempting Job, only provided the means for Satan to act. Others suggest that this phrase simply meant a "fierce lightning from above." Satan has power over the forces of nature and could have caused something to happen that the people living at that time would have attributed to God (see Matt. 4:1–11).

2:9, 10 These verses reveal the discussion between Job and his wife. There is no basis for suggesting, as some do, that his wife was killed by God for her statements against Job and that Job later married someone else. The fact remains that she endured the earlier trials (e.g., the death of her children, the loss of wealth and possessions) just as he had; yet the sight of her husband's physical condition caused her to relinquish all hope. In fact, her greatest sin may have been that she was so dependent on him that she could not bear losing him. There is no hint that their marriage was bad or that she was not a "fit" help meet for such a righteous man. If she had been so, it is doubtful that Job, being a righteous man, would have married her. Job was obviously surprised at her words, indicating that he was not used to hearing this kind of thing from her. His rebuke of her statement seems to have been sufficient, and she once again retained a proper testimony before the Lord.

2:11–13 These men were true friends of Job. They were fitting company for an upright man, despite the fact that many people condemn them because they were reproved at the end of the book. Verse twelve states that "they lifted up their eyes afar off, and knew him not." Some believe that his disease had so disfigured him that Job could not even be recognized by his friends. Verse thirteen says that they were silent, concerned, and confused. In the discourses that followed, these three men missed the basic truth that affliction is not always punishment (see Ex. 4:12; John 9:3). Much of what they said was true but was misapplied to Job's situation. It may even be that they were taken into the service of Satan "unawares." It is highly possible that Satan used the words of these men in an attempt to cause Job to sin. Christians often attempt to relate someone's physical condition to some great sin in his or her life. In seeking to comfort or reprove someone, people often misapply scriptural principles to another's life, because they do not fully understand the situation. Job's friends were convinced that God sent trouble proportionate to the measure of his sins. Everything they say was based on this presupposition. By applying this to God's testing of Job, they made God appear arbitrary and pitiless.

3:1 Job's conflict really begins in this passage. He had been struggling to determine the cause of his affliction. The only reasonable conclusion seemed to be that either Job was guilty of some sin worthy of this punishment or that God was unjust. None of them recognized that God was testing Job. In all this, however, Job never abandoned his faith in God.

4:1 The name "Eliphaz" means "God is strong" or "God is dispenser." He was the oldest of Job's three friends (Job 15:10). Teman, the land from which he came, was known for its men of wisdom (Jer. 49:7). Eliphaz became convinced that Job had committed some great sin for which he was being punished. He based this idea on his experiences which had taught him that man is wicked, and that he is punished according to his wickedness.

5:6, 7 These verses are a vivid illustration of man's depravity. Eliphaz is wrong, however, in his assumption that this explained Job's suffering. The sinfulness of mankind (original sin) explains only the existence of sorrow and suffering. What Eliphaz was unaware of was that God was permitting this affliction to come on Job for a purpose other than his mere sinful nature, namely the purifying and strengthening of Job's faith.

8:1, 6 "Bildad" means "son of contention." He was from the east, namely of Shuah or Sukhu in the Euphrates area (as was Zophar; see 1 Kgs. 4:30). As Job's other two friends had suggested, Bildad feels that Job is being punished for his sin; while before, he had been blessed with wealth and prosperity for his righteousness. He arrived at this conclusion based on tradition, namely, that was the way it had always been.

5 But oh that God would speak, and open his lips against thee;

11:1 Zophar's home was in the land of Naamah which may have been located in Northern Arabia. His name means "chatterer" or "rough." Like Bildad, he was from the East (1 Kgs. 4:30). He also believed that Job had committed some horrible sin, but he reached this conclusion from a legalistic interpretation of the circumstances. It is not known whether this truth had been written, revealed, or the outworking of the conscience at this time. It certainly could not have been the Law of Moses, for that had not yet been given (see the introduction to Job). Zophar suggests that in some way Job had broken this law and was being judged for this sin. His reasoning is that if the punishment for sin is suffering, then all who suffer must have sinned. He, like Job's other two friends, emphasized that man was rewarded for good (obeying God) and punished for evil (disobedience).

14:13–15 Job thinks that his life is coming to an end and desires some hope with which to sustain himself. It is important to remember that at this time no portions of Scripture had been written down, so there was no way that Job could have known all that has been revealed to us about heaven. At the time of the patriarchs, very little had been revealed about the resurrection of the body, so that they rested in the hope that their disembodied spirit would remain. Job's usage of phrases like "the grave" and "keep me secret" reflect his desire for the time when his soul would be separated from his present affliction and would be vindicated by God from the accusations his friends were making. At this time, Job begins to trust in a physical resurrection of his body (see the note on Job 19:25).

19:8–12, 20, 21 Job's statements in these verses reveal his confusion, for it seems that God has turned against him. Job's internal conflict is at its highest point. The arguments of the three friends follow a logical pattern, but Job knew that their conclusions were being misapplied to his situation. Nevertheless, if Job had rejected their conclusions as general truths, he too would have been conceding that God was arbitrary and unjust.

19:25 This verse mentions several important words and phrases. The word "Redeemer" pertains to the concept of the kinsman-redeemer (Job 16:19; see the note on Ruth 4:1–8). Job sought for one who would redress his wrong and avenge his injuries. In this verse, he acknowledges that God alone can be this "Redeemer." In admitting this fact, Job recognized more fully that he was serving the living God. By this, Job did not mean that God merely existed, or that God may have been realized on a conscious level; but Job believed that God was alive and concerned with his individual life, unlike the pagan idols who never answered the worship they were given. Knowing that his Redeemer was living and could vindicate him, Job uses the phrase "at the latter day" to refer to the time when his name would be cleared. It is debated whether Job hoped for vindication in his lifetime (at the conclusion of this time of suffering) or at some time after his death, when God would clear him of any wrong.

Job Wants Access to God

26:7 Many believe that the "empty place" is representative of heaven. The word "stretcheth" is a present participle in the Hebrew, and conveys the idea of continuous action. This fact could very well explain the scientific phenomena of an "expanding universe." Those who support an evolutionary explanation to the origin of the universe have suggested that the universe is expanding as the result of a large explosion. In this verse, however, the expanding universe is a result of God's creative design.

27:1–6 Though some contend that Job's words in this passage are self-righteous, it seems that they are more likely intended to balance the accusations against him.

32:2 Elihu is said to have been of the "kindred of Ram." The word "Ram" may be a shortened form of the word "Aram" which was an area located close to the border of the modern day countries of Syria and Turkey. Balak sent for Baalam who lived in Aram (Num. 23:17; 24:16) because it was an area known for its prophets. In contrast, Job's other three friends were from the East, an area known for the wisdom of man. The other three friends relied solely on their reasoning and presuppositions to explain the works of God. It seems evident that Elihu, and perhaps others, had been there throughout the ordeal, especially during the discussions between Job and his friends (Job 32:8, 9). Elihu's speeches introduce God as a teacher and Job's suffering as didactic (Job 35:10, 11). It is interesting that Elihu's words are never condemned by God, while the three friends of Job are severely reprimanded for their false presuppositions about God.

33:6–8 When Elihu made the statement, "my terror shall not make thee afraid," he was emphasizing that although he was the representative of God (Job 32:8–10), there was no aura about him nor any supernatural force at work. He was a man who was on equal footing with Job (v. 6) and was the answer to Job's request for someone to go between them (Job 31:35). It is possible that Elihu is a type of Christ in that he was the mediator between God and Job, just as Christ is between God and man.

35:9–14 In this passage, Elihu makes the point that Job was thinking himself to be more righteous than God. In truth, Job's own opinion about his goodness does not affect God in any way. It seems that Job has never bothered to come to God during this entire ordeal. Job's reasoning was condemned by Elihu who said that Job had no excuse for questioning God's existence or His care.

35:16 There are two possible interpretations for this verse. Some suggest that what Job said in his previous discussions was vain. Others contend that Job had begun to question whether God takes sin seriously (vv. 14, 15); therefore, Job's words will not matter (Nah. 1:1–3).

36:1–33 This chapter marks the proper application of scriptural principles to Job's situation.

38:1—42:6 These chapters record the seventy-four questions that God asked of Job. They are given not to answer the mystery of Job's suffering nor to vindicate God Himself, for in doing so, it would allow men to judge Him. Also, these questions are not designed to reveal God's omnipotence, for Job's submission in this manner would have been fatalism, not scriptural resignation. In addition to this, these challenges to Job were not given to reveal God's infinite wisdom. (There are many marvelous things about God and his works which are never answered.) God's purpose was to rescue Job. It is important to remember that faith does not have to look forward to vindication at the resurrection in order to survive.

The Book of

PSALMS

The Hebrew title for this book means "Book of Praises." The English title, however, was derived from the Greek word psalmoí which means "pious songs" or "music of stringed instruments."

The Book of Psalms is a collection of the works of at least six authors. The titles of the psalms credit David with writing seventy-three psalms and two others are assigned to him in the New Testament (Ps. 2, see Acts 4:25; Ps. 95, see Heb. 4:7). Asaph was the author of twelve psalms (Ps. 50; 73—83), or at least he is responsible for their preservation. The sons of Korah wrote eleven psalms (Ps. 42; 44—49; 84; 85; 87; 88), Solomon composed two (Ps. 72; 127), Psalm 89 is attributed to Ethan, and Moses is the author of Psalm 90 (and possibly Ps. 91).

The Book of Psalms was originally five separate books (Ps. 1—41; 42—72; 73—89; 90—106; 107—150). Each of the first four books concludes with a doxology and the fifth is a fitting finale for the book as a whole. Consequently, it is believed that the psalms were used for liturgical purposes. This is supported by Jewish tradition and the fact that the five books of Psalms correspond to the five books of the Pentateuch. The individual psalms are often classified according to their content: Didactic Psalms are those which give instruction (e.g., Ps. 119); the Messianic Psalms contain prophecy relating to the Messiah (see the note on Ps. 22:1–31); the Imprecatory Psalms involve pleas to God for the punishment of the wicked (see the note on Ps. 109:1–29); Penitential Psalms express not only the feelings of a repentant heart but also appeal for divine cleansing (Ps. 6; 32; 38; 51; 102; 130; 143).

Other psalms are classified according to their titles: psalms of degrees or ascent were sung at the beginning of the worship services at the temple and by those who were traveling up to Jerusalem (Ps. 120—134); miktām psalms deal with atonement or the covering over of sin (Ps. 16; 56—60).

The Psalms powerfully convey the feelings common to believers of all ages. The nature of Hebrew poetry (see the introduction to Job) is especially well suited for expressing strong feelings. The psalms are intimately personal in that they explore the whole realm of human emotion: from deep despair to ecstatic delight; from a yearning for vengeance to a spirit of humility and forgiveness; from earnest pleading with God for protection to jubilant praise for His deliverance. The general principle that can be seen in all of the psalms is that the writers have a serene confidence in God's guidance and provision.

1:1 The reasons for being "blessed" are not the same here as in Psalm 32:1. Here blessings are a result of right conduct, while Psalm 32 speaks of blessings which come from God's forgiveness. The forgiveness of Psalm 32 makes it possible to accomplish the practical righteousness of Psalm 1. However, both situations result in the spiritual and emotional joy and contentment which the word "blessedness" expresses.

2:9 The "rod" which Christ has is not a scepter, an emblem of his royal office, but is in actuality a rod of correction. The fact that the rod is made of iron indicates the severity and harshness of the judgment that will be meted out by Him at his return (Rev. 19:15). This harsh judgment is not inconsistent with the meekness and gentleness of Christ. Meekness does not exclude anger, but simply means that one is angry for the right reasons and at the right time (John 2:13–17). Jesus could truthfully claim to be gentle without contradicting His claim to be the Judge (Matt. 11:28–30; 23:2–39).

3:2 The word "Selah" occurs frequently in the Psalms, probably indicating a transition. It is a musical or liturgical note which is not part of the text of the psalm. Other musical or liturgical terms occur in the Psalms which are easily identified because they are left untranslated (higgāyōn (1902), shiggāyōn (7692), mikhtām (4387), etc.). These terms are so old that even the ancient rabbis were unsure of their precise meanings.

5:5 There are differing views as to what is meant when it says that God hates those who sin (Ps. 11:5). The first view suggests that God hates only the sin that the wicked do and not the people who commit the sins. They propose that if God hates sinners for their sin, then there is no hope for those who are believers, for they still have a sin nature and still sin (Rom. 7:14–20; 1 John 3:6–9). The problem with this view is that there is nothing in the context or grammar of the passage to support this understanding of the verse. Simply stated, "God hates all those who do iniquity."

Others believe that the Scriptures teach that God has in fact chosen to love some and hate others (2 Chr. 19:2; Mal. 1:2, 3). Of those who hold to this theory, some propose that God chooses to hate only those who remain in their sins, and to love those who come to Him in repentance. Others who hold this view say that God chooses to love some and not others based solely on His sovereign purpose.

6:5 This highly poetic and figurative passage represents the dead as entirely separated from earthly scenes, employments, and society. It is not by any means intimating that there is no existence past the grave, but merely that the existence there is has naught to do with the affairs of this life. This passage, along with Ecclesiastes 9:5, 6 and Isaiah 38:18, speaks of death as viewed from an earthly aspect, understanding it only in relation to this present life (cf. Gen. 37:35; 1 Sam. 28:15, 19; 2 Sam. 12:23; Luke 16:27, 28, 30; 1 Pet. 4:6).

14:1–3 This passage is cited in Romans 3:10–12 to emphasize the universality of sin (cf. 1 Kgs. 8:46; Prov. 20:9; Eccl. 7:20; Mark 10:18; Rom. 3:18, 23; 1 John 1:8). Some people see a contradiction between this clear doctrine of Scripture (that all have sinned) and passages like Genesis 6:9; Job 1:1; Psalm 24:3, 4; 86:2; Luke 6:45; and 1 John 2:1; 3:6, 9, which describe men as "perfect," "pure," and "holy." It must be realized that terms like "good" have a comparative meaning as well as an absolute one. All the goodness, holiness, or purity of man is only relative to other men's unholiness or impurity. Only God possesses the attributes in their absolute state. All men stand in need of the forgiveness and pardon of God which can only be obtained by appropriating the merit of Christ's work on the cross.

17:15 In this verse the reward of God's people is summed up as enjoying His presence (cf. Ps. 16:11; 1 John 3:2; Rev. 21:3; 22:3, 4). This reward is all a result of God's grace, apart from any merit of man (Matt. 20:14; John 14:2; Rom. 2:7; Col. 3:24; Heb. 11:16). All those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life will experience this bliss. In Scripture this is called "being with Christ" (John 12:26), "beholding His glory" (John 17:24), and "being glorified with Him" (Rom. 8:17, 18; Col. 3:4). All saints (cf. Ps. 16:3) will reign with Christ, and sit in judgment even over angels (Dan. 7:22; Matt. 19:28; 1 Cor. 6:3; 2 Tim. 2:12; Rev. 22:5). This expectation of believers is called "an inheritance" and is already secure for us in heaven (Matt. 25:34; Acts 20:32; Rom. 8:17; Heb. 9:15; 1 Pet. 1:4). Christ will reward those who have performed distinguished service with incorruptible crowns of righteousness, life, and glory (1 Cor. 9:25; 2 Tim. 4:8; James 1:12; 1 Pet. 5:4). This secure hope, which is an "anchor of the soul" (Heb. 6:19), ought not to lead one to complacency, but rather challenge one to press forward and endure hardships for Christ's sake (2 Cor. 4:16–18; Phil. 3:14; 2 Tim. 2:1–5; Rev. 2:10).

19:13 Inadvertent sins are compared here with "presumptuous sins," which are offenses against God carried out with a conscious knowledge that they are wrong. It is possible for believers to commit such sins. Because they continually receive grace from God, they may be tempted to use it as a license to sin. However, individuals who sin proudly, knowing the wrongness of their actions, all too often have never really been born again. It is for this reason that Scripture challenges believers to be sure of their salvation (Rom. 6:1, 2; 2 Cor. 13:5; 2 Pet. 1:10).

21:1 Some believe that the words of this psalm, in combination with 2 Samuel chapter seven, are pointing toward Christ.

8 Thine hand shall find out all thine enemies: thy right hand shall find out those that hate thee.

9 Thou shalt make them as a fiery oven in the time of thine anger: the LORD shall swallow*them*up in his wrath, and the fire shall devour them.

10 Their fruit shalt thou destroy from*the*earth, and their seed from*among*the*children of men.

11 For they intended evil against thee: they imagined a mischievous device, which they are not able to perform.

12 Therefore shalt thou make them turn*their*back, when thou shalt make ready thine arrows upon thy strings against the face of them.

13 Be thou exalted, LORD, in thine own strength: so will we sing and praise thy power.

Anguish and Praise

To the chief Musician upon Aijeleth Shahar, A Psalm of David.

22 My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me? why art thou so far from helping me, and from the words of my roaring?

2 O my God, I cry in the daytime, but thou hearest not; and in the night season, and am not silent.

22:1–31 This psalm is one of the so-called Messianic Psalms. There has been, however, much division among theologians as to which Psalms are actually Messianic. There are three methods that are used to determine which psalms are "Messianic." The first way is by the testimony of the writers of the Old Testament. There are a few occurrences of these particular psalms found in other books which attribute them to a discussion on the Messiah. Secondly, there are the references in the New Testament to these psalms, either by Christ Himself, or by writers who made note of them as pertaining to Christ. Finally, there is testimony by the Jews and the Church itself denoting that these psalms refer to the Messiah.

Along with these methods, there are several views as to the proper application of these "Messianic Psalms." One view suggests that these writings of David were describing him as well as the Messiah. By this, it is meant to say that they are to be applied directly to David and indirectly to Christ. Another opinion proposes that David's trials are spoken of only, not those of the coming Messiah. The key problem with this method of application is that there are some things mentioned as having been suffered by Christ, while some things were in fact never experienced by David. For example, David could not very well say that he had been forsaken (v. 1) when he does acknowledge (vv. 26–31) that David did have One that he could depend on for help. The last view suggests that these are in fact prophecies of Christ and David merely looked at them for comfort in his times of trial. This application is based on the fact that all these so-called "Messianic Psalms" can refer to Christ, and there are portions that do apply to Christ exclusively (Ps. 22:16–18). In regards to the latter view, Christians can also look back to these particular psalms in order to find comfort in times of suffering (2 Cor. 1:5).

23:1–6 This is doubtless the best-loved passage in the Old Testament. The setting is not given, but it is clearly the song of one who has lost worldly comfort and security. It may have been composed during David's years of flight from Saul, or while he tended his father's sheep. The image of Christ as the Shepherd is an intimate personal one. He is not set forth as the distant King or Lord, nor as the impersonal Rock or Shield, but as the Shepherd who takes care of all the needs of His sheep. David's own faithful care for his father's sheep may have led him to consider how fully he could trust in the Lord, his heavenly Shepherd. The Shepherd's ability to provide is never doubted, for David said, "I shall not want" (v. 1). However, God is described as One who not only meets the needs of the sheep, He is a Friend who desires to generously bestow His blessings upon them. David realizes that his situation is not just one of the absence of want but one where his "cup overflows" (v. 5). This psalm picturing the wonderful trusting and peaceful relationship one may have with God is a deep reservoir of comfort for many.

24:1 This psalm reflects David's jubilant attitude as a result of the capture of the "city of Zion" and the moving of the ark of the covenant to Jerusalem (2 Sam. 6:1–23).

A Prayer for Rescue

A Psalm of David.

35 Plead my cause, O LORD, with them that strive with me: fight against them that fight against me.

2 Take hold of shield and buckler, and stand up for mine help.

3 Draw out also the spear, and stop the way against them that persecute me: say unto my soul, I am thy salvation.

4 Let them be confounded and put*to*shame that seek after my soul: let them be turned back and brought*to*confusion that devise my hurt.

5 Let them be as chaff before the wind: and let the angel of the LORD chase them.

6 Let their way be dark and slippery: and let the angel of the LORD persecute them.

7 For without cause have they hid for me their net in a pit, which without cause they have digged for my soul.

8 Let destruction come upon him at unawares; and let his net that he hath hid catch himself: into that very destruction let him fall.

9 And my soul shall be joyful in the LORD: it shall rejoice in his salvation.

10 All my bones shall say, LORD, who is like*unto*thee, which deliverest the poor from*him*that*is*too*strong for him, yea, the poor and the needy from*him*that*spoileth him?

35:1–28 This psalm reflects David's cry for help while being pursued by Saul and his other enemies. See the note on Psalm 109:1–29 for a discussion of the Imprecatory Psalms.

37:25 The psalmist here merely stated his own experience. He personally had never seen "the righteous forsaken nor his seed begging bread." This does not mean that this never occurs. God does take care of His people. There is enough wealth in the world to provide food, clothing, and shelter for all. However, some do get more than their share, and others suffer. Even His children do not have access to the fullness of His glory (Ex. 33:20; 1 Tim. 6:16). The phrase "very present" in the Hebrew is nimtsā' me'ōd (from matsa' [4672] and me'ōd [3966]). 51:1–19 This is one of the greatest passages in the entire Bible concerning confession and forgiveness. It was written after David had committed adultery with Bath-sheba and subsequently had her husband Uriah killed in battle (see 2 Sam. 11:2–17). David's repentance included: (1) a godly sorrow for his sin (cf. 2 Cor. 7:10); (2) a verbal confession; (3) a turning away from sin and denouncement of it; (4) forgiveness; (5) restoration to God's favor; (6) rejoicing in salvation; (7) and a willingness to testify to others about the grace of God. 51:2 In this verse, David is picturing how God cleansed him of his sin. The idea David expresses is that God alone can forgive his sin and remove it (cf. 1 John 1:9), and it is not something that David could provide for himself. People often interpret this verse to mean that an individual must constantly receive cleansing from his sin for salvation. However, this passage is speaking of David confessing the specific sin that he committed with Bath-sheba in order to receive forgiveness for that sin only. In the Old Testament, man was required to go before a priest and have a sacrifice offered to receive a "covering" for his sin. Under the New Testament system of grace, however, a believer can go directly to his High Priest, Jesus, and can boldly approach God's throne and receive forgiveness for his sin, which was covered by Christ's shed blood on Calvary (Heb. 4:16).

73:20 How can it be that God would need to awake if He never sleeps (cf. Ps. 121:3, 4)? The answer to this dilemma is seen in the proper understanding of the meaning of the original Hebrew word. The word found in Psalm 73:20, translated "awakest," is the Hebrew word 'ûr (5782), which should be understood figuratively of awakening in the sense of beginning to act. This verse begins with a simile: "As a dream when one awaketh. . . ." The psalmist was relating how God acts in response to the wicked to how one acts upon awakening from a deep sleep (Judg. 5:12). Paul says of this time that God "winked at" their ignorance (Acts 17:30). In Psalm 121:3, 4, the writer makes it clear that God never sleeps as men do, losing consciousness. He makes it clear that since he does not slumber (nûm [5123] , "become drowsy"), how could it be that he should sleep (yâshên [3462], "sleep")? The psalmist is using this form of literature, which his readers could relate to in order to show that while God may seem to be "sleeping" and allowing them to continue in their wickedness, He will not fail to punish the ungodly.

8 Arise, O God, judge the earth: for thou shalt inherit all nations.

82:6 Some people attempt to explain the phrase "ye are gods" to mean that human beings can be gods as equal to God in His essence. The solution to this misinterpretation of these words is found in the proper interpretation of the word for "god" in Hebrew. It is the word 'elōhīm (430) which is used of God referring to His office as a Judge and Diviner of justice. In the establishment of the office of judge in the Old Testament, men were given the responsibility of representing this office of God. Thus, the usage of the term 'elōhīm would not be confusing to one who understands that the man merely represents Jehovah. In this psalm, however, God is condemning those who had perverted justice and had abused their God-given privilege to hold the office of a judge. The warning given in verse seven is that though they be "gods," though they hold this honorable office among men to rule over them as God's representative, yet they are but men and will die like all other men.

The distinction of the other names for God in Scripture can also help to understand this passage better. No other names of God, and in particular such names as Jehovah (3068 [Ex. 3:14]), El Shaddai (410/7706 [Gen. 17:1]), or Yah (3050 [Ps. 68:4]), are ever used of human beings. These names speak of or represent God's essence and attributes, of which man shall never partake. This fact is seen in the conclusion to verse six where it is stated that "all of you are children of the Most High," meaning that though they represent God, they are held accountable and are responsible to Him for their actions. This psalm is a cry to God for retribution for the injustices that these wicked judges have carried out and mentions God's response as well. The lesson that can also be learned from this psalm is that God was condemning these men for their sin, not the office to which they were called. There is an application for today in this: pastors and other church leaders often disobey God and fall into sin; however, the office of the pastor or deacon should continue to be respected as one that is God-ordained. It was the man who sinned.

the multitude of thy mercies; but provoked him at the sea, even at the Red sea.

8 Nevertheless he saved them for*his*name's*sake, that he might make his mighty power to be known.

9 He rebuked the Red sea also, and it was*dried*up: so he led them through the depths, as through the wilderness.

10 And he saved them from*the*hand of him that hated them, and redeemed them from*the*hand of the enemy.

11 And the waters covered their enemies: there was not one of them left.

12 Then believed they his words; they sang his praise.

13 They soon forgot his works; they waited not for his counsel:

14 But lusted exceedingly in the wilderness, and tempted God in the desert.

15 And he gave them their request; but sent leanness into their soul.

16 They envied Moses also in the camp, and Aaron the saint of the LORD.

17 The earth opened and swallowed up Dathan, and covered the company of Abiram.

18 And a fire was kindled in their company; the flame burned up the wicked.

19 They made a calf in Horeb, and worshiped the molten image.

20 Thus they changed their glory into the similitude of an ox that eateth grass.

21 They forgot God their savior, which had done great things in Egypt;

22 Wondrous works in the land of Ham, and terrible things by the Red sea.

23 Therefore he said that he would destroy them, had not Moses his chosen stood before him in the breach, to turn away his wrath, lest*he*should*destroy them.

24 Yea, they despised the pleasant land, they believed not his word:

25 But murmured in their tents, and hearkened not unto the voice of the LORD.

26 Therefore he lifted up his hand against them, to overthrow them in the wilderness:

27 To overthrow their seed also among the nations, and to scatter them in the lands.

28 They joined themselves also unto Baalpeor, and ate the sacrifices of the dead.

29 Thus they provoked*_him_*to*anger with their inventions: and the plague broke in upon them.

30 Then stood up Phinehas, and executed judgment: and _so_ the plague was stayed.

31 And that was counted unto him for righteousness unto all generations forevermore.

32 They angered _him_ also at the waters of strife, so that it went ill with Moses for their sakes:

33 Because they provoked his spirit, so that he spoke unadvisedly with his lips.

34 They did not destroy the nations, concerning whom the LORD commanded them:

35 But were mingled among the heathen, and learned their works.

36 And they served their idols: which were a snare unto them.

37 Yea, they sacrificed their sons and their daughters unto devils, 38 And shed innocent blood, _even_ the blood of their sons and of their daughters, whom they sacrificed unto the idols of Canaan: and the land was polluted with blood.

106:37, 38 These verses state that children were actually burned alive as offerings to Canaanite gods (Molech, Milcom, Chemosh, and others; see the note on 2 Kgs. 23:10). It is hard to understand how thorough the grip of such pagan superstitions must have been on people that they would burn their own children (see Jer. 7:31). Those who engaged in such practices assumed that the victims were purged of their dross (i.e. their physical body) so that they might attain union with the deity.

wcs,qmf2930 pp,pl,nn,pnx4639 wcs,qmf2181

109:1–29 This is one of the psalms which are known as the "Imprecatory Psalms" (see Ps. 7:11–17; 35; 58; 69; 83; and 137). Imprecation is the giving of prayers to invoke God's wrath upon the wicked. Down through the centuries there have been two extremes of thought on the proper use of imprecation. In the first instance, there are those who claim not only that imprecation is proper, but also that the punishment should be meted out by God's children. Others feel that imprecation was only proper in Old Testament times. They insist that New Testament "grace" demands that believers are never to pray in this manner. However, is not the command to love one's neighbor also found in the Old Testament (Ex. 23:4, 5; Prov. 20:22; 24:17)? Did not the Lord even then proclaim that vengeance is His (Deut. 32:35; cf. Rom. 12:19)? In the same manner note that David, the author of most of the imprecatory prayers of the Old Testament, was unwilling to hurt Saul, one of his worst enemies, even when he was delivered into his hand. Even more convincing is the fact that there are instances of such imprecation in the New Testament (Acts 1:20; 5; 8:20–23; 13:10, 11; Rom. 11:9, 10 [cf. Ps. 69:22, 23]; 2 Tim. 4:14).

In contrast to these two extremes the historic Christian view approves of imprecation, but points out a number of stipulations that apply. First of all, though it is impossible to remove entirely the personal aspect of these requests, the vengeance that is prayed for is actually more of a vindication. The wicked have not been provoked, nor do they commit acts of which the psalmist himself is guilty. Instead, the psalmist is concerned about God's reputation and cause. The imprecatory psalms exhibit only a righteous indignation for sin in which it is impossible to separate the sin from the sinner. The issue is given over to God (Ps. 35:1, 2; 69:7; 2 Tim. 4:14). Those who hate God and commit heinous sin will some day be judged for their wickedness. Believers should groan in agony that even one soul shall endure eternal punishment, yet they must accept the righteousness of God in so doing.

It is helpful to remember that these psalms are not hastily worded expressions of anger, but carefully written works of literature. Moreover, they are not the result of human hands, but inspired by the Holy Spirit. Like all Scriptural warnings, these psalms could be instrumental in the conversion of sinners.

Four elements that should accompany imprecation are noted in this psalm: love (v. 4); prayer (v. 4); doing good (v. 21); and blessing (v. 28).

142:1 David wrote this psalm upon the disparity of his soul in the cave of Adullam at En-gedi (1 Sam. 22; 24).

142:7 The "prison" mentioned here probably refers to David's current situation—he was hemmed in by enemies and opposition (see Ps. 143:11). This is a companion psalm to Psalm 57 (see the titles of each). David's mood in these Psalms indicates that he was affected by the stress of being a fugitive.

143:1 The occasion for this psalm was David's fleeing from Absalom (2 Sam. 15—18).

The Book of

PROVERBS

The Hebrew title comes from the word māshāl (4912 [Prov. 1:1]) which means "to be like." Perhaps this word helps the readers to understand the analogies between spiritual and material things. The actual term "Proverbs" was derived from the Latin title that the book was given, "Proverbium." The theme of the book is found in Proverbs 1:7, where the means by which wisdom comes is revealed—fearing the Lord. The results of the proper application of wisdom include the ability to use God-given talents wisely, the realization of one's moral obligations, and one's own intellectual maturity.

There are numerous authors of the Book of Proverbs; however, the book is often attributed to Solomon because he wrote the largest portion. Solomon's proverbs are divided into three sections: the longer, connected poems (chaps. 1—9); short, unrelated verses (chaps. 10—22:16); and longer, didactic poems (chaps. 25—29). Some would suggest that because the first and last section are similar, they were collected by the men of Hezekiah (Prov. 25:1). Another group of proverbs is referred to as "the sayings of the wise" (chaps. 22:17—24:34). Agar, the son of Jakeh wrote as well (chap. 30). The last collection of proverbs was written by King Lemuel (chap. 31). These were lessons that he was taught by his mother (v. 1).

In the Book of Proverbs there are numerous divisions based on their content. One such division is commonly referred to as "wisdom" proverbs (chaps. 1; 8; 9). They are referred to as such because of the personification of wisdom (Prov. 8:4, 12).

The Book of Proverbs may also be divided according to the style used by the authors. The first section contains the proverbs of advice to the young (chaps. 1—9). These are basically long, explanatory poems usually employing second person pronouns for direct address. Other phrases that note direct address are "my son" or "ye children." Solomon also addresses a number of proverbs to those who have a more mature mind (Prov. 10—22:16). Here, third person pronouns are used in a form of indirect address. Some concepts included in this portion are God's sovereignty (chaps. 16; 21) and child training (chap. 22). The third division is found in chapters twenty-two through thirty-one. These are a general collection of admonitions, directed at both the young and old alike. Some of the topics mentioned in the book are: benevolence (Prov. 11:24-26), the contrast between the "right way" and the "wrong way" (Prov. 14:12; 16:25), separation (Prov. 18:2-5), and avoiding drunkenness (Prov. 20:1; 23:29-32).

8:22–31 This passage has been understood by many scholars to be referring directly to Christ because of similar passages in the New Testament. The characteristics which belong to this personality called "Wisdom" do coincide with those of Christ: He existed before creation (Col. 1:16; Rev. 3:14, cf. vv. 23–31), He was with the Lord at creation (John 1:1, cf. v. 30), and His "delights were with the sons of men" (John 1:14; 13:1, cf. v. 31). Another factor which suggests that Deity is being spoken of is that the preposition "by" in the phrase "I was by him" (v. 30) has been found in every other case where it is used in the Old Testament (more than 60) to indicate the close spatial relationship between two specific persons or substances. Another view expresses the simple explanation that this is figurative poetic language which personifies the concept of wisdom. This interpretation does not necessarily demand, however, that pointing out similarities to the person of Christ is improper. A third view proposes that while it is wisdom that is being discussed, it can be regarded as typical of Christ.

18 But he knoweth not that the dead are there; and that her guests are in pp,pl,cs,nn6011 nn7585

9:13–18 Wisdom, which is personified as a woman in the previous passage, is contrasted here to the woman of folly. They have similar methods in that they both sit in the most noticeable places of the city (Prov. 8:2, 3; 9:3, cf. v. 14) and appeal to the simple (Prov. 8:6; 9:5, cf. v. 16). Wisdom offers rewards that are more valuable than many kinds of riches (Prov. 8:10, 11, 18, 19) and the woman of foolishness recommends the sweetness of "stolen waters" and the pleasantness of "bread eaten in secret" (v. 17). The consequences connected with these choices are altogether opposite. The guests of Wisdom receive many blessings (Prov. 8:34, 35), but those who turn to foolishness perish and pass into the depths of hell (v. 18).

20:27 The word for "spirit" in Hebrew literally means "breath," as we find it translated in Genesis 2:7. Many feel that this verse refers to the conscience which man is given by God to aid in self-examination and self-control. It is an internal control just as chastening blows are external controls (Prov. 20:30). Note how the use of both can affect the entire person – "the inward parts."

21:4 Since the vowels of the words were not written in the original Hebrew manuscripts, there are two possible translations for the Hebrew word which is rendered "plowing" in this verse. By inserting other vowel sounds, this could also be translated "lamp." Both readings are supported by a number of later Hebrew manuscripts in which the vowel sounds have been inserted. If "plowing" is used, then the verse affirms that even the activities of the wicked, which would otherwise be constructive, are sin. If "lamp" is correct, the most logical interpretation would be that it is a figurative representation of the person's entire spirit.

22:6 In the Hebrew, the word translated "train up" is usually translated "dedicate." Thus, it may indicate that the child is to be devoted to God (though not as Hannah did; 1 Sam. 1:11) or it may simply indicate that the child is to be prepared for the responsibility he will know as an adult. The phrase translated "in the way he should go" literally means "according to the mouth of the way." It might best be rendered "according to the way he acts," indicating that the instruction given should be in accordance with that which is proper for him. This may mean that it is only his stage of intellectual and spiritual development that is referred to, or it may mean that his instruction should include the customs and traditions of his native land.

While such training may provide fertile ground for the Holy Spirit to work, it does not necessarily mean that the child will be saved. In addition to this, it does not mean that all the children who have turned to a life of sin will someday return (as did the prodigal son to his father [Luke 15:11–32]) just because they have been given a good upbringing.

The quality of training which the child receives is a critical concern. Parents should not assume that simply bringing their children up in a moral atmosphere is all that is needed. The primary goal in training up a child is that they be educated in the knowledge of God (Eph. 6:4), but they should also be provided with a thorough preparation for life in general. When a child does choose to rebel and lead a corrupt life, it is often the parents who have failed in some way as teachers or in being the proper examples. It must be recognized, however, that there will be instances when the parents have done their best to correctly train a child, yet he or she will choose to reject the instruction they have received and go their own way.

23:11 God was the true owner of all the Promised Land although it had been permanently allotted to the families of Israel (see Dan. 12:13). A redeemer, according to the Old Testament Law, was someone who bought the land and possessions of one of his relatives when that kinsman could not retain possession of it (see the note on Ruth 4:1–8). This was done so that the land would still be owned by someone in the same family. However, the Redeemer mentioned here directly refers to the God of Israel.

The emphasis of this warning is that one should avoid people that delight in making changes just for the sake of making changes. It is directed at individuals who are prone to follow men that recklessly challenge authority without any worthy purpose or objective in mind (cf. Prov. 1:10–19). Although the primary focus seems to be upon those who desire to irresponsibly introduce changes in the governmental system or its workings, it may also be applied to agitators of any kind.

30:5, 6 Verse five declares that every word of God is completely free of imperfections. This fact demands that the words of Scripture not be slighted or considered to be in error in any way. Furthermore, no part of it should ever be neglected or regarded as less important (2 Tim. 3:16). History is full of those who concentrated so heavily upon certain biblical concepts in favorite passages that they became blind to other important truths. Sound preaching and balanced devotions will not be restricted to the same portions of Scripture over and over again. It is crucial to remember that the Bible should be interpreted with the whole of its doctrines and principles in mind.

31:10–31 This passage is an acrostic poem. Each of the twenty-two letters in the Hebrew alphabet is used in sequence to begin the first word of each verse (another acrostic poem is Ps. 119). This poem sings the praises of a good wife. It extols the honor and dignity of women, and emphasizes the importance of the mother in the home. The secret of her dignity and honor is that she "fears the Lord" (v. 30). As a result, her husband trusts in her, and she becomes a source of honor to her whole family. The poem does not criticize physical beauty as some claim (v. 30); it merely asserts that being physically attractive is a temporary condition, while virtue has eternal worth.

ECCLESIASTES

The title of this book in Hebrew, Qōheleth (6953), is the word translated "Preacher" in chapter one, verse one. The English title is a transliteration of the title in the Septuagint, the Greek translation of the Old Testament. The Greek word Ekklesíastes, which means "speaker of a called out assembly," is derived from the word ekklēsía which is the New Testament word for "church."

Solomon's name does not explicitly appear in the text, but tradition has uniformly ascribed the book to him. In verse one, the author describes himself as the "son of David, king in Jerusalem." Though other "sons" of David did become king in Jerusalem, the contents of the book and the facts about the author make it clear that it was Solomon. No one else could claim to be over Jerusalem and be as wise as Solomon (Eccl. 1:16). Furthermore, who else had the means to build and acquire goods that Solomon had (Eccl. 2:3–8)? Likewise, are any so well known for the setting forth of many proverbs (Eccl. 12:9)? It seems that Solomon, after a lifetime of seeking after the things of this world, was brought to repentance by the rebuke of the Lord (1 Kgs. 11:9–13). Most likely, he sat down at this time and wrote, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, about the vanity of his worldly pursuits and attempts to find peace and joy in temporal things. The application of this book to the Christian life is seen in that Solomon is cautioning those who know Christ as their personal Savior to return from their prodigal ways. Those who are not saved are warned by Solomon's own example that life at its best is but vanity without Christ.

The perspective of Solomon at the time he wrote is the key to properly understanding the Book of Ecclesiastes and to explaining its general pessimism. Solomon writes from the same perspective by which he had lived most of his life, that of one "under the sun" (Eccl. 1:3 and thirty other occurrences!). It is from the earthly, secular perspective that life becomes futile. Yet even so, there are times when Solomon's faith in God is made known (Eccl. 12:13, 14 is usually referred to, but this is only the climax of thoughts like 2:25; 3:11, 17; 8:12, 13; 11:9).

Solomon's consideration of life without God led him to the conclusion that life is unjust. Oppression goes on, the wicked prosper, and the fruits of man's labor pass from his control (Eccl. 1:15; 2:21; 4:1, 8; 6:2; 7:15). Not only this, but the Preacher ended up like the pleasure-seekers of today; "We may as well enjoy ourselves, because it will soon be all over" (Eccl. 2:24; 3:12; 5:18; 8:15; 9:7–10).

Countless lives throughout history have confirmed the Preacher's findings; wisdom, pleasure, alcohol, human achievement, great riches, sex —all lead to emptiness, "vanity," if there is not a proper relationship to God (Eccl. 1:13; 2:1, 3, 8, 10, 12).

1:2 The theme of the Book of Ecclesiastes is that "under the sun [i.e., without God in the picture], all is vanity." The key word in the book is "vanity," occurring thirty-eight times. It is used to describe outward and tangible things (Eccl. 2:15, 19; 8:10, 14) as well as inward thoughts (Eccl. 1:14; 2:11). The word "vanity" is from the Hebrew hevel (1892), which emphasizes that which is empty and passing. The phrase "vanity of vanities" denotes the Hebrew way of expressing a superlative (it could be translated "most futile"). This method is also seen in the phrase "most holy place" (Ex. 26:34), of which the literal meaning in the Hebrew is "holy of Holies."

2:11 This verse is Solomon's reflection on all that he had accomplished. The result of it all was emptiness. The words that best describe Solomon's feelings at this point are "vanity and vexation of spirit." In all of the supposed pleasures of life, he found no satisfaction (Heb. 11:25). The cause of all this "vanity and vexation" was that Solomon had not learned how to restrain his desires. There are many believers that have not learned this lesson well enough. In the end, however, they will see that the fulfillment of fleshly desires will be unprofitable. Their accomplishments for God are a testimony of Him to the world, but the times when the flesh is not restrained will result in a reproach on the cause of Christ.

2:24 This verse shows that life should be lived to its fullest. Solomon was not expressing the hedonistic view seen in the phrase, ". . . take thine ease, eat, drink, and be merry" (Luke 12:19). Rather, he is suggesting that man should keep the pleasures that he enjoys in his life in perspective with his responsibility to God (1 Tim. 4:4, 5; 6:17). Also, in light of the theme of the Book of Ecclesiastes, it should be understood that all good things that come about as a result of the fulfillment of fleshly desires are "vanity." However, if a man works diligently, acknowledging that God's hand is on his life, he will be blessed. He must exhibit a pure heart in all his actions (see the note on Eccl. 7:16, 17). The key is to "do all to the glory of God" (1 Cor. 10:31).

3:1 Solomon continues his defense of his labors in the flesh by suggesting that there must be some profit in seeking to establish stability in one's life. There is much in the world that is changing, and Solomon is trusting in those things which he thinks have provided him with security. What he discovers is that there is One who keeps the world in order—that is God. He is the One who causes all things to happen in their "seasons" and gives everything a "purpose." It is evident from the examination of God's character that He is all-knowing. He knows the end of everything, and all that is done is controlled by His providential hand. All the events of history have been fitted into God's timetable. For instance, the deliverance of His chosen people, the Israelites, out of bondage in Egypt was done because of God's promise made to Abraham (see the note on Gen. 15:13–16). The fulfillment of this promise is seen in the usage of the phrase "the selfsame day" (Ex. 12:41), noting that God was bringing the children of Israel out of Egypt at the precise time that He had said. The prophecies about the coming of Christ were fulfilled "when the fullness of time was come" (Gal. 4:4). Christ came and accomplished all the Father's will just as it had been planned. God's purpose had been carried out specifically in regard to the time of Christ's incarnation. The fact that God is immutable and unaffected by the circumstances of this world is incomprehensible to the human mind. The only way that Solomon could find true happiness was in knowing that in God's providence all events would be worked out according to His purpose (Rom. 8:28).

and God requireth that which is past.

3:11 God is able to use anything and anyone for the fulfillment of His purposes. Furthermore, He knows the events that have transpired in the past as well as those things that will be in the future. God has made all things which are by their nature good and pleasing to Him, and which things will please Him at the appointed time that He has established (see the note on Eccl. 3:1). In His omniscience, God has seen how the events of time will unfold in regard to mankind. The capacity of man to understand these factors is limited by the fact that he is a finite creature, not an eternal one. He is also limited in that he can only amass a certain amount of knowledge about God in his lifetime. Therefore, man is incapable of finding "out the work that God maketh from the beginning to the end." In other words, God knows the end as well as the beginning. Since He knows the outcome, God can see how each piece fits into His plan. The only alternative for man, since he cannot see the end from the beginning, is to trust completely in God.

4:12 In the phrase "a threefold cord is not quickly broken," it is clear that Solomon is pointing out the advantages of companionship. Moreover, he presents this illustration to show how God, in mercy, provides help to those who will depend on Him. In Ecclesiastes 4:9–11, Solomon explains further by examples how this concept of companionship is beneficial. He shows that there are definite advantages to working together (vv. 9, 10). However, he revealed how terrible the circumstances would be if one had to face adversity alone.

This concept of unity and working together is one that is seen throughout Scripture. From the time of creation, God provided companionship by making a help meet for Adam (Gen. 2:18). Even Christ, in the commissioning of his disciples, sent them "two and two" (Luke 10:1–3). He knew that they would face adversity and persecution from the world. In providing companionship, they would be able to lift one another up and continue their ministry even when they were persecuted. The concept of the "unity of the body of believers" is seen in the books of the New Testament. Phrases like "the whole body, fitly joined together" (Eph. 4:16) and "have the same care one for another" (1 Cor. 12:25) adequately explain the idea that God desires unity among the believers in the Church (John 17:21).

7:16, 17 There are two unique concepts explained in this passage. First, there is the possibility that in doing righteous things, one may become ritualistic, merely going through the formality of religion. In doing so, he never applies the truth to his heart. In contrast, the wicked man finds security in his ways, but to continue in them will only result in death and destruction (see the note on Job 21:23–26). He sees himself as being able to escape God's wrath, when in reality, he is acting foolishly (Prov. 15:3).

Some interpret this passage as giving them the right to establish their own standards and rules in their own minds for living life. They do this based on the notion that these verses are teaching that there is danger in having too much substance to one's religious practices. In reality, however, God examines the heart of the individual and knows the motives behind one's actions (Heb. 4:12; see the note on Job 35:9–14). God alone knows whether a person is practicing religion in form only, or if he is sincere. Jesus addressed the Pharisees on this issue. He condemned them for their wrong motives in serving God. He referred to them as "whited sepulchers" (Matt. 23:27). In knowing their thoughts, Christ saw that they sought prestige from their religious positions. The phrase that Solomon used in verse sixteen, "righteous over much," adequately describes the Pharisees' vain approach to service to God. Solomon did not write concerning the excessive nature of righteousness, but against the development of a wrong attitude about service to God.

8:8 Solomon is simply stating that man cannot control the time of his death. When the time comes for a person to die, there is no power within him to stop or even delay it from happening. The certainty of death and man's inability to control the time of it have plagued mankind throughout his existence. If he knew the specific time that the end was coming, he would certainly seek to delay it. The truth is that God is in control of man's destiny. Only Christ was able to say that He had "power to lay it (His life) down" and the "power to take it again" (John 10:18). In man's view, the only solution for death is to attempt to prolong life. Medical methods have improved over the centuries, but it is still by God's grace and power that He allows people to continue living. The truth is that man has been appointed a time for death (Heb. 9:27). Even in the Christian's life, he must acknowledge that becoming a believer does not make him exempt from death. For the believer, there is the promise of eternal life following death, which should be a source of hope to continue living for God.

delivered the city; yet no man remembered that same poor man.

9:10 Solomon, in writing these words, provides a ruling principle which should govern one's accomplishments in this life. Goals should be set and they should be reached with all the fervor and energy that one can display. In doing so, it should be understood that there are limits given to what is meant by the phrase "whatever thy hand findeth to do." People need to use wisdom in determining which goals are within their capabilities. Furthermore, there is the need to realize that some things should not be done at all, specifically those things which bring reproach to Christ's name. The guiding principle for fulfilling one's goals should be to follow God's direction and will with a pure heart. Paul encouraged believers to "not [be] slothful in business" but "fervent in spirit, serving the Lord" (Rom. 12:11). The focus of this verse in Ecclesiastes is on the attitude of the heart, or better the motives behind the actions. Solomon wrote "do it with thy might." This word "might" is also used to describe how one's worship for God should be conducted: "love the LORD thy God. . . with all thy might" (Deut. 6:5). God's desire is for obedience, but He also requires that it be done from a pure heart.

In the last portion of this verse it is stated that certain things which people see as important in this life will not be taken with them into eternity. Wealth, prestige, and position will all be left behind. Indeed, believers should continue to "work out [their] own salvation with fear and trembling" (Phil. 2:12). They must, however, keep in mind the motives behind what is done here on earth (see the note on Eccl. 8:8).

9:11 See the note on Ecclesiastes 3:1 concerning the providence of God.

12:1 Solomon is making this admonition to young men and women, warning them about the dangers of not restraining one's fleshly desires. Solomon had failed miserably in this area. He had many wives and much riches, all of which turned his heart away from serving God (1 Kgs. 11:1–8). However, he writes at the end of his life to encourage young people to follow God while they are still in their youth so that in their old age, they will look back on a fruitful life, having been blessed of God. The use of the term "Creator" reveals that a person owes a great debt to the One who has formed him. How can he do less than serve and devote his life to God? When this fact is realized, then one can reflect on his life with peace in his heart. The result of this reflection is the acknowledgement that the pleasures of this life cannot compare to the joy that comes from living for God. Unfortunately, Solomon had lived foolishly, yielding to those desires and being held captive by them.

12:7 The belief in an afterlife has always been a part of God's revealed faith. This is seen in that Enoch "was not [on earth] for God took him" (Gen. 5:24). There are some who deny that there is such a thing as an "immortal soul" which is separate from the body. They teach that all those who have died are now in a state of unconsciousness and will remain so until the resurrection of the dead by God. Numerous passages of Scripture clearly teach that the soul exists even after death (Luke 16:19–31; 2 Cor. 5:8). Examples of those who expressed a knowledge of an existence after death are seen throughout the Old Testament: David expected to be reunited with his dead child (2 Sam. 12:23); Job spoke of a bodily resurrection and communion with God (see the note on Job 19:25); and Isaiah made reference to a life after death (Is. 26:19). A number of passages in the Psalms reflect expectations of reward and punishment after death (Ps. 17:15; 49:15; 73:24, 26). This verse in Ecclesiastes chapter twelve provides the basis for the concept of a person being both material and immaterial. The two results of death are seen here: the "dust," which is the material part, returns to its place of origin; while the "spirit," the immaterial part, returns to God who gave it to man at his creation—"[God] breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul" (Gen. 2:7). In fact, in 2 Timothy 1:10, the Apostle Paul states that in Christ's resurrection from the dead, "He abolished death, and hath brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." He is referring to the day when there will be a reuniting of the body and the soul for those who have trusted in Christ for salvation. See the note on Ecclesiastes 8:8.

12:13, 14 Solomon had been on a long journey "under the sun" (see the note on Eccl. 1:2). The journey was a life of futility and emptiness. Now, at the conclusion, the Preacher puts all his words into a proper perspective. All the things done for selfish gain are unimportant, pointless, and futile because they are all secondary. The primary focus of man should be to "fear God and keep His commandments." This is the only proper course for the believer to follow that is God-ordained. The Preacher continues by stating that God will eventually evaluate all the deeds that are done in order to reveal the motives behind them. All will be brought before Him, even the things done in secret. This evaluation will be based on obedience to the commandments that He has given as a guide for the believer's life.

SONG OF SOLOMON

The Hebrew name of this book, "Song of Songs," remained the same in the Septuagint and the Latin Vulgate. The Song of Solomon is part of a collection of Old Testament works known as the "Megilloth" (scrolls). The other books that are included in this group are Ruth, Esther, Ecclesiastes, and Lamentations. The Song of Solomon is important in Jewish tradition because portions of it were sung at the annual Feast of Passover.

This book of songs was written by King Solomon of Israel (Song 1:1). One factor which substantiates this fact is that ancient Jewish tradition has held that he was the author. Furthermore, the style and vocabulary are very similar to the Book of Ecclesiastes, which was also written by Solomon. All the cities mentioned in the book point to an undivided kingdom, which continued only until just after Solomon's death (Song 6:4). There are also references to horses, royal luxury, an abundance of wealth, and numerous plants and animals from the area of Palestine, all of which seems to identify Solomon as the author of the book (1 Kgs. 4:27–33). The references to Solomon's harem, which housed his wives and concubines (Song 6:8), would place the writing of the book at approximately 950 B.C.

The Song of Solomon has been the most misunderstood book in all of Scripture. Perhaps this is because it is the only book of Scripture in which the main plot is about "human love." The interpretation of this book has been a subject of debate for centuries. Some view the book as a literal, historical depiction of pure human love and marriage. They would suggest that no figurative or allegorical meaning was ever intended. Within this group are those who say that Solomon was only writing a book of profane love and wedding songs which have little or no spiritual value. Another interpretation of the book is that its meaning is allegorical and that all that is said is figurative. Supporters of this view say that Solomon wrote under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit to show the Lord's love for Israel and His love for the Church and each believer. As the "bride" of Christ, the Church and Israel are required to return that love as if bound by wedding vows. The typical interpretation acknowledges the historical setting, but believes that the characters and relationships are typical of Christ and the Church. Some suggest that the speakers are Solomon and the Shulamite woman, a view rarely held. In contrast, most believe that there are three people involved in the narrative: Solomon, the Shulamite, and the shepherd lover (Song 1:7; 4:7–15). The historical perspective is of importance in that Solomon and the Shulamite woman are describing the ramifications of pure love, while the shepherd is trying to turn the woman's heart away from Solomon. The shepherd attempts to convince the woman that though she has been taken to the palace of King Solomon as his bride, she would really rather be at home with the shepherd, close to all that he claims she holds dear. These characters are representative of the relationship of God with His people. Solomon represents God and Christ, and the Shulamite woman (as the bride) refers to His chosen people, Israel, and to believers (Is. 54:5,6; Jer. 2:2; Eph. 5:23–25). Finally, the shepherd lover is a picture of the world and its entrapments, which seek to destroy the bond that is formed between God and His people.

and be thou like a roe or a young hart upon the mountains of Bether.

2:15 This verse is a warning regarding allowing the little, and seemingly insignificant sins to overtake one's life, robbing him of the joys of a pure relationship with his Lord. The "little foxes" are characteristic of those things which come oftentimes unawares and go unnoticed, and ultimately ruin a man's life. Christians need to learn from this passage that they need not be so proud in their own spirituality. In doing so, they fail to guard against the attack of Satan on their lives. The term "tender grapes" suggests that these sins may become a problem while a person is still young and not yet able to determine the consequences of allowing himself to be overtaken by them.

2:17 The phrase "turn . . . upon the mountains of Bether" is a reference to the situation in which the believer has placed himself and is the prayer of that believer that Christ would come and remove the "mountains" or barriers that separate him from God. The word "Bether" is found only here as a proper name. It generally refers to a place of division, and the mention of mountains may suggest that it is a place of rough terrain and danger. God's hand of protection is there to guide the believer through the times of trial and danger. The "roe" (or gazelle) and the "young hart" (a young deer) are animals known for their quickness and agility. However, they tend to remain in places of danger, waiting for their rescue, which may, in fact, never come. These animals illustrate the need of believers to walk patiently in the mystery of providence within the world. They should anticipate the coming of the "dawn," that is, Christ's return. Christ desires to come to His own for fellowship, so that the blessings that He bestows will be shared with the ones He loves. These times of fellowship with the Lord should be the longing of the believer's heart.

3 By night on my bed I sought him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

2 I will rise now, and go about the city in the streets, and in the broad ways I will seek him whom my soul loveth: I sought him, but I found him not.

3 The watchmen that go about the city found me: to whom I said, Saw ye him whom my soul loveth?

4 It was but a little that*I*passed from them, but I found him whom my soul loveth: I held him, and would not let him go, until I had brought him into my mother's house, and into the chamber of her that conceived me.

5 I charge you, O ye daughters of Jerusalem, by the roes, and by the hinds of the field, that ye stir*not*up, nor awake my love, till he please.

5:10 The picture given in this verse is of one adorned with all the splendor and graces that exhibit one's physical beauty. The phrase "the chiefest among ten thousand" illustrates that none can be compared to her beloved's beauty. The expression "white and ruddy" notes the perfect condition of a person's complexion, one of healthiness and beauty. These terms are used in the description of David in his youth (1 Sam. 16:12). This verse wonderfully portrays the beauty of Christ in that He was without blemish, the spotless Lamb of God (John 1:29). It is also a fitting description of how Christ's Church will be presented as "glorious . . . not having spot, or wrinkle . . . and without blemish" (Eph. 5:27).

6:4 The name "Tirzah" means "true beauty and delight." This city was mentioned as one that was conquered by Joshua in the conquest of the Promised Land (Josh. 12:24). It was also the capital of the Northern Kingdom until the time of Omri (1 Kgs. 14:17; 15:21; 16:6), when the capital was moved to Samaria. The city of Tirzah represented all that was beautiful in royal splendor. Apparently, Solomon had erected magnificent structures there to display the majesty of his kingdom. For this reason also, Jerusalem is compared to the beauty of Solomon's beloved. As the center of politics and religion in Israel, Jerusalem was the epitome of all the splendor that Solomon could display. The Lord compares His beloved to "a city that is set on a hill [which] cannot be hid" (Matt. 5:14). In the further description of the beloved one, he is depicted as "terrible as an army with banners." This does not necessarily refer to a representation of power. Rather, it denotes the idea that when one appears in radiant beauty, the beholder becomes awe-struck.

8:6, 7 The "seal" mentioned in verse six is referring to the Jewish practice of wearing jewelry next to the heart with a name or portrait of a loved one or family member engraved on it. This represented the close relationship that existed between Solomon and his beloved. The phrase "seal upon thine arm" denotes the closeness when the beloved is embraced in the arms of Solomon. His statements that follow (i.e., "love is strong as death; jealousy is cruel as the grave") reveal the desire that his beloved would remain faithful to him. The feelings expressed here are similar to the one's that prompted the revenge of Levi and Simeon in regards to the rape of their sister, Dinah (Gen. 49:5–7; cf. Gen. 34:1–31). This is applied to Solomon's situation to illustrate that there is nothing that can suppress his love which is described as a "blazing fire" and "mighty flame." In 1 Kings 18:38, the power of God unleashed to its fullest extent is also demonstrated in a consuming fire. Verse seven states that the fires of pure love cannot be easily extinguished. The latter portion of the verse reveals the futility of building one's love on material things.

ISAIAH

The theme of this book is expressed in the meaning of the name Isaiah, "the LORD saves" or "the LORD is Savior." The Book of Isaiah contains more prophecies about the Messiah than any other book in the Old Testament. In fact, the plan of salvation is so comprehensively revealed in Isaiah's work that Augustine called it the fifth Gospel, and others have referred to it as "the Bible in miniature."

Some have attempted to discredit the authenticity of the prophecies of Isaiah by suggesting that Isaiah was not the author of them all. The historical view as to the authorship of this book, however, has consistently held that Isaiah composed the entire book. This view is supported by the fact that each time a portion which the detractors dispute is quoted in the New Testament, Isaiah is named as the author.

Traditionally, Isaiah is thought to have been the son of a prince of Judah. He certainly did not feel uncomfortable in the presence of kings (Is. 7:3–12; 37:21), and the richness of his vocabulary suggests that he was a man of culture and education. He ministered for over forty years (740–697 B.C.) during the reigns of four Judean kings (Is. 1:1): Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah. While Uzziah and Jotham were in power there was relative peace and prosperity, but Isaiah's writings, as well as those of the contemporary prophets Hosea, Amos, and Micah, reveal that the people were spiritually destitute (Hos. 4:1, 2, 6–8; Amos 2:6–8; Mic. 1:5; 3:1–11). When King Ahaz came to power, Syria besieged Jerusalem (2 Kgs. 16:5). Isaiah was given the task of urging him to trust the Lord for a favorable outcome, but Ahaz called on Assyria for help instead (1 Kgs. 16:7). Hezekiah made great strides in bringing about religious reform in the nation and was well acquainted with Isaiah (2 Kgs. 18:1–7; 19:1, 2; 20:1–11). It is not known precisely when Isaiah died, but according to tradition, he was sawed in half with a timber saw during the reign of King Manasseh (cf. Heb. 11:37).

The Proud Will Be Destroyed

5 O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the LORD.

6 Therefore thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they be replenished from*the*east, and are soothsayers like the Philistines, and they please themselves in the children of strangers.

7 Their land also is full of silver and gold, neither is there any end of their treasures; their land is also full of horses, neither is there any end of their chariots:

8 Their land also is full of idols; they worship the work of their own hands, that which their own fingers have made:

9 And the mean man boweth down, and the great man humbleth himself: therefore forgive them not.

10 Enter into the rock, and hide thee in the dust, for fear of the LORD, and for*the*glory of his majesty.

11 The lofty looks of man shall be humbled, and the haughtiness of men shall be bowed down, and the LORD alone shall be exalted in that day.

12 For the day of the LORD of hosts shall be upon every one that is proud and lofty, and upon every one that is lifted up; and he shall be brought low:

13 And upon all the cedars of Lebanon, that are high and lifted up, and upon all the oaks of Bashan,

14 And upon all the high mountains, and upon all the hills that are lifted up,

15 And upon every high tower, and upon every fenced wall,

6:1–13 This chapter presents God's calling of Isaiah. Some see this as Isaiah's initial call to his prophetic ministry. Others, who note that the book is generally arranged chronologically, suggest that it was a special call after he had already begun his ministry.

Isaiah's call began with a vision of God's holiness (vv. 1–4). This vision terrified Isaiah and made him feel totally inadequate and unclean (v. 5; see also Job 42:5, 6; Ezek. 1:28; 4:23 and Dan. 10:8, 11). When the angel touched Isaiah's lips with the hot coal from the altar and said that his sins were forgiven (vv. 6, 7), Isaiah was fit for service to God. Later, when God asked for a representative, Isaiah responded with an answer that has been an example to believers ever since. Isaiah answered, "Here am I; send me" (v. 8). Like Jeremiah (Jer. 1:17–19) and Ezekiel (Ezek. 2:3–7), Isaiah was commissioned to speak to obstinate people who rejected God. The words of Isaiah's commission (Is. 6:9, 10) were used repeatedly by Jesus in the New Testament to explain why He taught in parables (Matt. 13:14, 15; Mark 4:12; Luke 8:10). John also referred to them when he explained why so few Jews had responded to Jesus' message (John 12:40), and Paul used them to explain why he had switched the emphasis of his ministry from the Jews to the Gentiles (Acts 28:26, 27).

7:14 The famous prophecy of Christ's virgin birth is contained in this verse. The events of chapter seven occurred about 734 B.C. Isaiah was sent to King Ahaz with a reassuring word (Is. 7:4–9), but Isaiah's word also challenged him to exercise faith in God during this crisis (cf. Hezekiah's response in Is. 36—38). The Lord generously offered to grant a sign to Ahaz to bolster his faith (Is. 7:11). However in this crisis, Ahaz was not trusting in God, but in his alliance with Assyria (2 Kgs. 16:7–9). His reply, "I will not ask . . ." was pure hypocrisy (v. 12).

Few passages have provoked such controversy as this verse, even among those who hold to a conservative viewpoint. Recent studies have a uniform tendency to downplay the miraculous aspects, and rationalize that this verse is a prophecy that some young woman would shortly bear a child in the normal way, and the brief time of his youth would see the downfall of those countries now threatening Judah and King Ahaz. It is believed that these approaches do not do justice to the text, and some reasons are summarized below.

(1) The meaning of the Hebrew word 'almāh (5959). It has become commonplace to suggest that 'almāh does not mean virgin, and that in fact, had Isaiah meant "virgin," he would have used the Hebrew word bethūlāh (1330). The facts of language are otherwise. 'Almāh is the clearest word Isaiah could have chosen to convey the idea of virginity. There is no appearance of 'almāh in the Old Testament where the meaning "virgin" cannot be used. Bethūlāh , on the other hand, often needs qualification to clarify whether or not "virgin" is intended (e.g., Gen. 24:16, where Rebekah is described as a "virgin [bethūlāh], neither had any man known her." Note that 'almāh, which occurs later in the same context [Gen. 24:43], needs no such qualification. The qualification is doubtless needed because bethūlāh, unlike 'almāh, can sometimes refer to a married woman [Deut. 22:24; Joel 1:8]). It is evident that 'almāh ought indeed be translated "virgin" on the basis of Hebrew usage. But this is not the extent of the argument. The Greeks, who translated the Old Testament into their language hundreds of years before Christ, had no question; they translated Isaiah 7:14, in the Septuagint, with the Greek word parthénos, the word for "virgin." Finally, the Holy Spirit affirmed this as the meaning when He guided Matthew to use parthénos when quoting Isaiah 7:14 in Matthew 1:23.

(2) The meaning of the word 'ōth (226), "sign." Those who suggest that the birth mentioned in Isaiah 7:14 would be a normal birth contradict the significance of 'ōth. This word never refers to ordinary events, but always to special or distinctive actions or things. With reference to God, it is commonly translated as, or understood to refer to, "miracle." This is particularly true of its uses in Isaiah, which, aside from this context, are concentrated with reference to God's miraculous sign of the sundial (chaps. 37; 38), and with God's miraculous millennial dealings with Israel (chaps. 55; 56). Therefore, the "sign" would need to be something extraordinary, not merely the normal birth of a male child who would live to see the downfall of Syria. It certainly would not be the defeat of Syria and Israel by Assyria! That was the very thing Ahaz was scheming to do without God's involvement!

(3) The specific reference of the prophecy. One must note that after Ahaz refuses a sign, God does not address him again. Verse fourteen is addressed to the whole "house of David." This immediately takes us beyond a rigid focus on the current scene. Moreover, the language of the announcement "Behold, a virgin shall conceive, and bring forth . . ." is reminiscent of pagan phraseology used to announce the birth of "gods." It is not suggested that Isaiah is likening Christ's birth to that of some pagan idol, merely that the idol-worshiping Ahaz would recognize the significance of the prophecy. Note also that both "virgin" in verse fourteen and "child" in verse sixteen have the definite article. It is agreed that these are articles of general reference, and that "a virgin" is the proper translation in verse fourteen. But note what happens if we translate "a child" in verse sixteen. That prophetic verse makes excellent sense on its own as a statement about the length of the crisis, with no reference to verse fourteen. One must also observe that the Hebrew word ben (1121), which means "son," is used in verse fourteen, while a completely different Hebrew word, na'ar (5288), meaning "young man," appears in verse sixteen.

(4) The child born. The name is "Immanuel," or "God with us." He cannot be just any child for in Isaiah 8:8 (and probably 8:10) "Immanuel" is presented as the true owner of the land (cf. the implications of Lev. 25:23), and the one who will vanquish Assyria. Further, the "son" to be born is mentioned again in Isaiah 9:6 and 11:1–5, and is clearly seen there to be a divine Person. No child of normal parentage could be so

(5) The nature of messianic prophecy. Throughout the Old Testament, passages of messianic importance are presented without chronological separation or distinction. Peter explicitly states that the prophets were ignorant regarding when the messianic prophecies would be fulfilled (1 Pet. 1:10–12). It was indeed this prophecy of Isaiah 7:14 itself which was to be a sign. Its mysterious reference to a virgin birth would remain (as it did) to challenge students of God's word until the proper time came for it to be fulfilled.

8:1–4 This is the second child of Isaiah whose name was given for a "sign" to God's people (Is. 8:18). Before the child was born, God told Isaiah to write "Maher-shalal-hash-baz" (v. 1), which means "the spoil hastens, the prey speeds." This is a warning of the imminent destruction that was to come on Damascus and Samaria. Isaiah's other son's name, "Shear-jashub" (Is. 7:3) means "a remnant will return" (10:20–22). The significance of the latter name extends far beyond the current crisis to the return from exile in Babylon. See the note on Ezekiel 24:15–24.

8:8 Ahaz refused to heed Isaiah's two signs, so this oracle spelled out the consequences for Judah. The words "even to the neck" probably refer to the fact that when Sennacherib devastated Judah in 701 B.C., Jerusalem herself did not fall. See the note on Micah 1:9.

8:14 This verse is one of three passages in the Old Testament which describe the coming of the Messiah using the imagery of a stone (see also Ps. 118:22 and Is. 28:16). Several other uses of the word "stone" are not clear references to Christ, but may be understood in this way (Dan. 2:34, 35, 45; Zech. 3:9). Jesus used Psalm 118:22 to explain why the Jewish leaders had rejected Him (Matt. 21:42; Mark 12:10, 11; Luke 20:17). Peter explained that Jesus Christ was the "head of the corner" or "cornerstone" (Acts 4:11) and the believers were "stones" in a spiritual house (1 Pet. 2:6–8). Paul used the rejection of the "stone" to show why the Jews misunderstood the Messiah and the Gentiles did not (Rom. 9:32, 33).

God's Assurance to Israel

41 Keep silence before me, O islands; and let the people renew their strength: let them come near; then let them speak: let us come near together to judgment.

2 Who raised up the righteous man from*the*east, called him to his foot, gave the nations before him, and made him rule over kings? he gave them as the dust to his sword, and as driven stubble to his bow.

3 He pursued them, and passed safely; even by the way that he had not gone with his feet.

4 Who hath wrought and done it, calling the generations from*the*beginning? I the LORD, the first, and with the last; I am he.

5 The isles saw it, and feared; the ends of the earth were afraid, drew near, and came.

6 They helped every one his neighbor; and every one said to his brother, Be*of*good*courage.

7 So the carpenter encouraged the goldsmith, and he that smootheth with the hammer him that smote the anvil, saying, It is ready for the soldering: and he fastened it with nails, that it should not be moved.

42:1–9 This is the first of four "Servant Songs" in Isaiah (see also Is. 49:1–9; 50:4–11; 52:13–53:12 [some would add 61:1–3 although the term "servant" does not appear there]). Some Jewish theologians tend to identify the "servant" in these passages as the people of Israel. This is primarily a reaction to the Christian view that these songs are prophecies of Christ. However, there are several problems with this view, which include Israel being presented as the beneficiary of the servant's action (Is. 49:6). A similar difficulty arises from the statement that the servant suffers vicariously for the sins of others (Is. 53:5–6). There were no righteous people in Israel who could suffer for others (Jer. 5:1), especially since Israel was suffering for their own sins (Jer. 25:1–10). The servant is clearly said to be an individual (Is. 52:13–53:12), but the language of the passage in chapter forty-two shows an objective point of view which means that Isaiah cannot be referring to himself. Furthermore, there are references to future events that exclude historical characters (Is. 52:13, 15; 53:11). The servant's sinless character, resurrection, and work go infinitely beyond man's capabilities (Is. 42:4; 49:5; 53:4–6, 11). These passages can only refer to Christ. In fact, the New Testament explicitly identifies the servant as Jesus (Matt. 12:18–21; Luke 2:32; Acts 13:47; 26:23), especially in relation to Isaiah 52:13—53:11.

44:28 Cyrus was the Medo-Persian king who conquered Babylon in 539 B.C. where the Jews had been exiled. He also allowed the exiles to return to Jerusalem. Isaiah predicted his name and actions 150 years before his birth. Note that God calls Cyrus "my shepherd" and "my anointed" (Is. 45:1), terms which are also used of Jesus. The Hebrew word for "anointed" is the root from which the term "Messiah" is derived. Consequently, there were some Jews who lived during the time of Christ that thought these words about Cyrus actually meant that the Messiah would come as a mighty conqueror.

52:13—53:12 This "Servant Song" is one of the most explicit prophecies of Christ's atoning work on Calvary. It caused a great struggle within Judaism because it clearly connected the Messiah with suffering and death. As a result, some Jewish scholars even suggested two messiahs: one who would suffer, and another who would reign. They could not see ahead of time how Jesus could fulfill both sets of prophecies. Jesus applied this prophecy to Himself (Luke 22:37), as did His disciples (Matt. 8:17; John 12:38; Heb. 9:28; Rev. 5:6, 12; 13:8).

JEREMIAH

The name Jeremiah means "whom Jehovah has appointed." He was appointed a prophet before his birth (Jer. 1:5, cf. Paul's statement about his own call in Gal. 1:15, 16). In God's touching Jeremiah's mouth to give His message to him (Jer. 1:9), one is reminded of Isaiah's call (Is. 6:6, 7). His complaint of lack of ability (Jer. 1:6) is similar to Moses' words (Ex. 4:10).

Jeremiah's ministry extended from 627 B.C. until after the fall of Jerusalem in 586 B.C., a period of roughly fifty years (Jer. 1:2; 25:3). He stated that his message was primarily one of judgment upon Judah for its shameful and persistent sins (Jer. 1:10). Moreover, Jeremiah encouraged the people to submit to Babylon to avoid further bloodshed (Jer. 27:1–17). This message was hardly popular with the inhabitants or their rulers, and often Jeremiah's life was in jeopardy (Jer. 26:1–24; 37:1—38:13).

There is archaeological confirmation of the people's opinion concerning Jeremiah's message in the "Lachish Letters." These are pottery fragments used as "scratch paper" by the defenders of Lachish against Babylon. The people of Lachish criticized the defeatism induced by "the prophet" in Jerusalem, who can hardly be any but Jeremiah. These external circumstances and the sadness of his message, coupled with Jeremiah's own periodic depression, contributed to the style with which Jeremiah wrote (Jer. 4:19–22; 20:7–18). For this reason he is called the "weeping prophet."

Nonetheless, Jeremiah also received some of the great visions of promise: the return from captivity (chaps. 25, 29); the New Covenant (chap. 31); and the ultimate return of the Messiah to Jerusalem (chap. 23). The Book of Jeremiah is not arranged in chronological order, but is grouped according to subjects: God's dealings with His people (chaps. 1—45); God's dealings with foreign nations (chaps. 46—51); and the destruction of Jerusalem and the temple (chap. 52).

Some would suggest that Jeremiah is a type of Christ. He was accused of political treason, as was Christ, and was tried, persecuted, and imprisoned for the words he had spoken (Jer. 11:18–23; 20:1–6; cf. Mark 14:53–65). In addition to this, Jeremiah and Christ both foretold and wept over the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem (Jer. 22:5–7, cf. Matt. 23:37–39). And lastly, each was rejected by his own people (Jer. 20:1–3; 36:32; cf. John 1:11).

2:2–37 The content of chapter one discusses the signs which authenticated Jeremiah's calling. This chapter shows the beginning of Jeremiah's ministry and reveals the sinful condition of the people of Judah. It begins with a reflection back on the wilderness experience with Israel (cf. Num. 14:32, 33). This passage also echoes God's earlier description of faithless Israel as His "bride" (Hos. 2:15). In relation to this analogy, chapter three characterizes both Israel and Judah as unfaithful wives.

Jeremiah Preaches

7 The word that came to Jeremiah from the LORD, saying,

2 Stand in the gate of the LORD's house, and proclaim there this word, and say, Hear the word of the LORD, all ye of Judah, that enter in at these gates to worship the LORD.

3 Thus saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

7:2–15 Jeremiah is showing the folly of trusting in nonliving objects. Even more pertinently, it condemns those who somehow feel they have special favor from God. The Jews felt that they were safe because God was obligated to protect His temple. Isaiah had already warned them that this would not do any good (Is. 66:1, 2), yet they refused to listen (Jer. 7:4). God now makes it clear that He will destroy the temple, just as He allowed the Tabernacle at Shiloh to be destroyed (v. 14, cf. Jer. 12:7; 26:6). The situation was similar in Jesus' day; the Jews felt they had a right to God's miraculous intervention. Jesus reminded them of two instances in the Old Testament where God intervened for non-Jews while leaving Jews to suffer (2 Kgs. 5, Naaman the Syrian; 1 Kgs. 17, the widow of Zarephath). Even though Jesus was quoting the Scripture, the Jews were so incensed that they sought to kill Him (Luke 4:24–29).

16:2–5 In contrast to Isaiah (Is. 8:1–3) and Ezekiel (Ezek. 24:18), Jeremiah was told not to marry because of the horrors that families with children would endure, particularly during the final siege of Jerusalem (see the note on Ezek. 24:15–24). This passage reiterates a prominent theme of Jeremiah: there can be no peace outside of obedience to God. Jeremiah's message opposed that of the false prophets who were continually crying "peace" (Jer. 6:14; 8:11; 14:13; 28:9, cf. Ezek. 13:10, 16), even when there was no peace to be found (Jer. 8:15; 14:19). Now, the only peace the Jews could pray for was the "peace of Babylon," for they were about to spend seventy years there (Jer. 29:7).

Jeremiah Pleads With God

14 Heal me, O LORD, and I shall be healed; save me, and I shall be saved: for thou art my praise.

15 Behold, they say unto me, Where is the word of the LORD? let it come now.

16 As for me, I have not hastened from*being*a*pastor to follow thee:
neither have I desired the woeful day; thou knowest: that which came out of my lips was right before thee.

17 Be not a terror unto me: thou art my hope in the day of evil.

18 Let them be confounded that persecute me, but let not me be confounded: let them be dismayed, but let not me be dismayed: bring upon them the day of evil, and destroy them with double destruction.

The Sabbath Must Be Observed

19 Thus said the LORD unto me; Go and stand in the gate of the children of the people, whereby the kings of Judah come in, and by the which they go out, and in all the gates of Jerusalem;

20 And say unto them, Hear ye the word of the LORD, ye kings of Judah, and all Judah, and all the inhabitants of Jerusalem, that enter in by these gates:

21 Thus saith the LORD; Take heed to yourselves, and bear no burden on the sabbath day, nor bring*it*in by the gates of Jerusalem;

22 Neither carry forth a burden out*of*your*houses on the sabbath day, neither do ye any work, but hallow ye the sabbath day, as I commanded your fathers.

23 But they obeyed not, neither inclined their ear, but made their neck stiff, that they might not hear, nor receive instruction.

24 And it*shall*come*to*pass, if ye diligently hearken unto me, saith the LORD, to bring in no burden through the gates of this city on the sabbath day, but hallow the sabbath day, to do no work therein;

25 Then shall there enter into the gates of this city kings and princes sitting upon the throne of David, riding in chariots and on horses, they, and their princes, the men of Judah, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem: and this city shall remain forever.

26 And they shall come from*the*cities of Judah, and from*the*places*about Jerusalem, and from*the*land of Benjamin, and from the plain, and from the mountains, and from the south, bringing burnt offerings, and sacrifices, and meat offerings, and incense, and bringing sacrifices*of*praise, unto the house of the 18:7–10 God chooses to consider man's conduct, and respond accordingly. Perhaps this is best illustrated in the case of Nineveh. Jonah came to Nineveh with a word of judgment which offered no opportunity for repentance (Jon. 3:4). Yet because the people put their faith in God and repented, God stayed His judgment (Jon. 3:5–10). Jonah already knew that God was merciful, and would respond in this way (Jon. 4:1–3). Later, God did judge Nineveh as He had said, and the city is a ruin to this day. It is important to recognize when God makes an unconditional affirmation of what He will do. This kind of promise will not change regardless of what man does. Notice the promises in Jeremiah chapters thirty-three and thirty-four where God affirms that the coming judgment is temporal and does not nullify His former promises to Israel (Deut. 7:6, 7; 2 Sam. 7:8–17). God compares the security of those promises with the constancy of day and night (Jer. 33:20, 21, 25, 26; see also 31:35–37).

20:7–18 This passage clearly reveals why Jeremiah is called "the weeping prophet." He is shown to be a human being, but one who was chosen to carry out God's work. Jeremiah was subject to the same emotions that are common to all men. Yet through it all, Jeremiah continued to preach God's message (v. 8) because he was compelled by God's call (v. 9, cf. Paul's experience in 1 Cor. 9:16). In verse one he complains that God has deceived him, but in verse thirteen he is singing praises to God. Then in the very next verse he begins to wish he had never been born (v. 14).

22:24–30 Jeremiah proclaims the Lord's rejection of the line of Coniah from the kingship of his people. The fact that he was "written childless" does not mean that he had no children, but that none of his children (mentioned in 1 Chr. 3:17, 18) would sit on the throne. He was succeeded by his uncle Zedekiah, the last king of Judah. The curse regarding God's replacement of Coniah in the promises of the Davidic Covenant seems to have been expiated according to Haggai 2:23 where Zerubbabel (said to be the son of Shealtiel) was chosen by God (Hag. 2:23). This did not abrogate the Davidic Covenant given in 2 Samuel 7:11–13 (see Ps. 132:11; Is. 9:6, 7; 16:5; Jer. 33:15–17; Ezek. 34:23, 24; Luke 1:32). Jeremiah 23:5, 6 again makes this clear. Although this has not yet taken place, it will upon Christ's return (Luke 1:32; Rev. 4:10, 11; 5:13; 12:5). See the note on 1 Chronicles 3:17–19 for a discussion of the relationship of Zerubbabel to Pedaiah.

23:5–8 This is one of several passages which refer to the Messiah. He is described by four terms which parallel the four Gospels. The first is found in this passage as "unto David a righteous Branch, and a King," signifying His rulership as seen in the Book of Matthew (see also Is. 11:1; Jer. 33:15). The other three phrases and their passages are as follows: "my servant the BRANCH," in Zechariah 3:8, referring to the Messiah's service to God, which is seen in the Book of Mark; "the man whose name is the BRANCH," in Zechariah 6:12, depicting His humanity seen also in the Gospel of Luke; and "the branch of the LORD," from Isaiah 4:2 referring to the Messiah's deity as seen in the Book of John. Since He is identified as a "servant," He is connected as well with the messianic "Servant Songs" in Isaiah (see the note on Is. 42:1–9).

The passage also contains a key unfulfilled prophecy concerning God's future dealings with Israel (vv. 7, 8). There is coming a day when Israel will no longer identify themselves with the exodus from Egypt, but with the return of all Jews from worldwide captivity. This has clearly not happened yet.

29:1–32 This chapter records an ongoing correspondence between Jeremiah in Jerusalem and the exiles in Babylon. It reveals that those who were exiled were encouraged by false prophets (Jer. 28:2–4, 10, 11; 29:21, 25–31) and had refused to accept Jeremiah's earlier word (Jer. 25:11). They were living as if they were not going to be in Babylon the full seventy years. Consequently, Jeremiah reaffirmed that the Exile would last seventy years and challenged the people to accept it and live accordingly. The Lord even told them to pray for His blessing to be upon Babylon (v. 7). This did not mean that they would lose their identity. In fact, over one hundred years later, the Jews were still a distinct element in the Persian Empire (Esth. 3:8).

There are two possibilities presented for the beginning and end of the Seventy Year Exile: either from the first deportation of exiles in 605 B.C. to the return under Zerubbabel in 536 B.C., or from the destruction of the temple in 586 B.C. to its rebuilding in 516 B.C. The time is accounted for in either case. Not only was the seventy years a measure of God's judgment on Israel, it was also the basis for the prophecy of the yet future "seventy weeks of Daniel" (see the note on Dan. 9:24–27).

30:3—31:26 This passage is a promise not only of the Israelites' return from exile, but of their ultimate restoration (31:12). However, before this blessing will come the Great Tribulation, described here as "the time of Jacob's trouble" (30:7). This will be brought about because of Israel's sin (30:11–15), but ultimately "he shall be saved out of it" (30:7). Following this trouble will be the reign of the Messiah (30:9, 21). The manifestation of God's "everlasting love" (31:3) will be seen in His rebuilding of the nation (30:17–20; 31:4–7, 28, cf. Jer. 1:10b). Within this interaction of judgment and blessing is the prophecy of the mourning of Jerusalem's fall, as well as Herod's slaughter of the infants (31:15, cf. Matt. 2:18). There is a note of comfort, nevertheless (30:16, 31:29, 30 See the note on Ezekiel 18:1–32.

31:31–34 This is one of the most important passages in the Old Testament. Here are several specifics concerning this New Covenant: (1) It is a covenant with the whole, reunited nation of Israel, not the Christian Church which is "grafted in" to Israel's promised covenant (Rom. 11:16–27). (2) The realization of it for the nation of Israel is reserved for the "last days" (cf. 31:27, 31, 38; 32:42; 33:14; Ezek. 37:26; Heb. 8:8). (3) It is based upon the full and eternal atonement secured by Christ's death (31:34b, cf. Matt. 26:26, 27; 1 Cor. 11:25; Heb. 9:15), by which sins are not only forgiven, but God remembers them no more (31:34b). (4) It will be based on an individual, personal knowledge of God and His Law (31:33, 34) which can only be acquired by the indwelling of God's Spirit (Ezek. 36:26, 27; 37:14). (5) It will be an everlasting, eternal covenant of peace, administered by God's Leader, the Son of David, the Prince of Peace (Is. 9:6; 55:3; Ezek. 34:23–25; 37:24–26). More details of the fulfillment of the New Covenant are found in the note on Daniel 9:24–27.

36:2 In order to encourage Judah to repent, God wanted Jeremiah to write down all the words which He had given him since Jeremiah began to prophesy more than twenty years before. Jeremiah dictated the words to Baruch, his scribe (Jer. 36:4). The scroll was eventually read by King Jehoiakim, and he destroyed it piece by piece (Jer. 36:23). God simply directed Jeremiah to write it again, giving him additional words, and Jeremiah and Baruch repeated the process (Jer. 36:27, 32). Earlier, Isaiah had written and sealed up an oracle at God's command (Is. 8:1, 16), and Habakkuk was told to write down a vision as well (Hab. 2:2).

Jeremiah Rescued From the Dry Well

38 Then Shephatiah the son of Mattan, and Gedaliah the son of Pashur, and Jucal the son of Shelemiah, and Pashur the son of Malchiah, heard the words that Jeremiah had spoken unto all the people, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, He that remaineth in this city shall die by the sword, by the famine, and by the pestilence: but he that goeth forth to the Chaldeans shall live; for he shall have his life for a prey, and shall live.

3 Thus saith the LORD, This city shall surely*be*given into the hand of the king of Babylon's army, which shall take it.

4 Therefore the princes said unto the king, We*beseech*thee, let this man be put*to*death: for thus he weakeneth the hands of the men of war that remain in this city, and the hands of all the people, in speaking such words unto them: for this man seeketh not the welfare of this people, but the hurt.

5 Then Zedekiah the king said, Behold, he is in your hand: for the king is not he that can do any thing against you.

6 Then took they Jeremiah, and cast him into the dungeon of Malchiah the son of Hammelech, that was in the court of the prison: and they let down Jeremiah with cords. And in the dungeon there was no water, but mire: so Jeremiah sunk in the mire.

7 Now when Ebed-melech the Ethiopian, one of the eunuchs which was in the king's house, heard that they had put Jeremiah in the dungeon; the king then sitting in the gate of Benjamin;

8 Ebed-melech went forth out of the king's house, and spoke to the king, saying,

3 But Baruch the son of Neriah setteth*thee*on against us, for to deliver 44:8 Apparently, the group of Jews who had fled to Egypt were still involved in idolatry. These people somehow thought that their well-being depended upon their worship of "the queen of heaven" (44:17, 18, cf. Amos 4:4–11). Only the reality of seventy years in exile finally cured Israel of idolatry. Israel had problems with legalism and pharisaism after the Exile, but never again did idolatry become prevalent.

Jeremiah's Message to Baruch

45 The word that Jeremiah the prophet spoke unto Baruch the son of Neriah, when he had written these words in a book at*the*mouth of Jeremiah, in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah, saying,

2 Thus saith the LORD, the God of Israel, unto thee, O Baruch;

3 Thou didst say, Woe is me now! for the LORD hath added grief to my sorrow; I fainted in my sighing, and I find no rest.

4 Thus shalt thou say unto him, The LORD saith thus; Behold, that which I have built will I break down, and that which I have planted I will pluck up, even this whole land.

5 And seekest thou great things for thyself? seek them not: for, behold, I will bring evil upon all flesh, saith the LORD: but thy life will I give unto thee for a prey in all places whither thou goest.

The Battle of Carchemish

46 The word of the LORD which came to Jeremiah the prophet against the Gentiles;

2 Against Egypt, against the army of Pharaoh Necho king of Egypt, which was by the river Euphrates in Carchemish, which Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon smote in the fourth year of Jehoiakim the son of Josiah king of Judah.

3 Order ye the buckler and shield, and draw near to battle.

4 Harness the horses; and get up, ye horsemen, and stand forth with your helmets; furbish the spears, and put on the brigandines.

5 Wherefore have I seen them dismayed and turned away back? and their mighty ones are beaten down, and are fled apace, and look*not*back: for fear was round about, saith the LORD.

The Book of

LAMENTATIONS

Lamentations was originally part of the Book of Jeremiah. It was later isolated because it was read publicly at one of the feasts of Israel and was included in the Five Megilloth (or scrolls; see the introduction to the Book of Ruth). Lamentations is read each year at Tisha B'av, a fast commemorating the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem (2 Kgs. 25:8, 9) in both 586 B.C. and A.D. 70.

The style and content leave no doubt that Jeremiah, the "weeping prophet," is the author. The book focuses on the destruction of Jerusalem as observed by an eyewitness (cf. Jer. 37—39). Jeremiah alternates between horrible accounts of the destruction of the city to the confessions of the people's deep sins, and then to his appeals to God for mercy.

Each of the five chapters of the book is a separate poem of mourning. The first four are acrostics (each of the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet are used to begin each stanza of the poem). The acrostic is a literary device that makes the poem easier to remember and abstractly suggests that the author has covered his subject from beginning to end. It may also be that Jeremiah, under the inspiration of the Holy Spirit, made himself conform to this method to keep his grief from overwhelming him. Lamentations is a valuable commentary on sin and its consequences, and about the return to God for mercy (Lam. 3:22–24).

1:12 Some have compared this verse to Jesus' sorrow when he looked at Jerusalem and saw the impending destruction of the city, even as Jeremiah had seen in his day (Matt. 23:37–39; Luke 13:34, 35). Others suggest that this verse refers to Christ's agony on the cross of Calvary, as He cried for those who are separated from God as a result of sin. The true sorrow is seen in that it has been inflicted on Christ by God Himself (Luke 23:26–38).

1:19 The term "lovers," found also in verse two, refers to the allies that Judah had joined with in hopes that they would protect her from Assyria. These "lovers" soon betrayed them and joined with Judah's enemies to fight against her and destroy Jerusalem. The Babylonians, Syrians, and Egyptians were close allies with Judah during Jeremiah's day (Jer. 2:18, 19; 22:20–25). These alliances of Judah are mentioned in Ezekiel's prophecy concerning Egypt (Ezek. 29:6–16).

2:4, 6 The word "tabernacle" is found in both these verses, but is a translation of two different Hebrew words. In verse four the Hebrew word is ōhel (168) which simply means one's "dwelling place" or "house." The second usage of "tabernacle" (v. 6) comes from the word sōk (7900) meaning a "pavilion" or "protective hedge." This second usage is a reference to God's house, the temple in Jerusalem, the place of God's presence and glory. God, in His providence, used foreign invaders to destroy His temple so that the people could no longer offer their vain sacrifices and worship false gods there. The analogy of the "garden" is a depiction of a person who protects what is his own possession. In the same way, the temple was God's sacred possession.

3:22–24 In this passage, Jeremiah expresses how overwhelmed he is by the destruction of Jerusalem, by the sin of the people that brought it about, and by the suffering that resulted from the destruction. He found it difficult to be diverted from his somber frame of mind. Although Jeremiah did acknowledge God's sovereignty over these events, he expressed his confusion over the fact that God had allowed this suffering. This message of Jeremiah is a statement of God's mercy to His people on a daily basis despite the Israelites constant unfaithfulness to Him. He was reminded that all the blessings in life come from God (see James 5:11), and that his trust should be in God alone.

3:33 The term "willingly" that is used in this verse comes from the Hebrew word lēb (3820) which means "from his heart." God does not want to have to bring hardships into people's lives, but He may do so in order to teach, convict, and bring them into a right relationship with Him. Even though the children of Israel were having their cities destroyed and were being carried away into captivity, the message of this verse is that the people had, by their sin, brought this judgment upon themselves.

3:37–39 Jeremiah uses a series of rhetorical questions here to point out that God is just in all that He does. In verse thirty-eight, the word translated "evil" is actually from the Hebrew word ra' (7451) which means "judgment." The justice of God, when applied to man's sinful state, requires that there be a swift and immediate judgment (v. 39).

5:10 The phrase "our skin was black like an oven" is a figure of speech which describes the condition of people who become feverish as a result of suffering from starvation.

5:21 This prayer by Jeremiah reflects the hope that the people of Jerusalem would return to a proper relationship with God. Compare the days when His glory filled the temple at its consecration by Solomon (1 Kgs. 8:10, 11).

The Book of

EZEKIEL

The name Ezekiel means "God strengthens" and is appropriate in light of the difficulties Ezekiel would endure. Ezekiel was, with Jeremiah and Zechariah, one of three prophets who were also priests. He was taken to Babylon from Jerusalem in the second deportation (597 B.C.) along with King Jehoiachin (2 Kgs. 24:8–17; Jer. 22:24–30). At the age of thirty (Ezek. 1:1), when a priest would normally begin his ministry, Ezekiel received his prophetic call from the Lord (593 B.C.). He spent the rest of his life in Babylon, but he received visions of both contemporary and future events relating to Jerusalem. As might be expected from a priest, Ezekiel was concerned about the desecration of the temple which existed in his time, but also with the glory of the millennial temple of the future. The last date that Ezekiel records (Ezek. 29:17) is twenty-two years after his call.

The main topics discussed in the book fall into three basic sections: those prophecies which stress the impending disaster of Jerusalem's fall (chaps. 1—24); the judgments pronounced on surrounding nations (chaps. 25—32); and the future hopes and trials of God's people (chaps. 33—48). The purpose of Ezekiel's book can be described as threefold: (1) to show that Judah and Jerusalem were being judged for their sin; (2) to encourage the exiles with prophecies of God's future blessing on Israel; and (3) to emphasize God's glory and His character as that which should be most important to His people. This third reason is expressed over seventy-five times in the phrases "for mine holy name's sake" (Ezek. 36:22) and "they shall know that I am the LORD" (Ezek. 36:38).

The key phrase in the book, "the son of man" (Ezek. 2:1), is used about forty-five times. It stresses the idea that one possesses the qualities and characteristics of his father. Consequently, when Jesus used the terms "Son of man" and "Son of God" to refer to Himself, He was showing that He had the characteristics of both deity and humanity. "The glory of the LORD" is also a prominent theme, being mentioned over fifteen times in the book (Ezek. 3:12, 23; 8:4; 9:3; 10:4, 18, 19; 11:22, 23; 39:21; 43:2 [twice], 4, 5; 44:4).

1:4–28 Ezekiel received his calling to be a prophet through a visionary experience. There are four main elements in this vision: (1) The four living creatures (Ezek. 1:4–14) are called cherubim (Ezek. 10:15, 20) which are a class of angels (Gen. 3:24) possibly related to the seraphim (Is. 6:1–6), and the living creatures of Revelation chapters four and five. Some suggest that the four faces of these cherubs are indicative of God's character, while others believe they are simply four examples of God's creative work. (2) The wheels and the "wheel in the middle of a wheel" (Ezek. 1:15–21) were thought by teachers of Judaism to be God's chariot. As a result of this interpretation, mysticism was commonly incorporated into the meaning of this portion of Ezekiel's vision. The simplest explanation of the image is that it speaks of God's omnipotence and sovereignty over the universe. (3) The brilliance of the firmament (Ezek. 1:22–24) is representative of God's holiness and majesty (see Rev. 4:6). (4) The throne, which is occupied by the "appearance of a man" (Ezek. 1:25–28), affirms that God is in control of the affairs of man and active in judgment.

2:8—3:3 Ezekiel was directed by God to perform many unusual acts in connection with the message that he had received from God. In this vision he ate a scroll, presumably because it had on it the words he was to utter (cf. Rev. 10:8–10). Another time, Ezekiel acted out an escape through the city wall by some of his fellow countrymen back in Jerusalem (Ezek. 12:3–7). He used a type of shadowboxing to depict the Babylonian slaughter which was coming (Ezek. 21:14–17). At times during his preaching he would clap his hands, stamp his feet and cry, "Alas" (Ezek. 6:11), or as he cried and wailed, he would slap his thighs (Ezek. 21:12). As a sign to the people, he used a brick to represent Jerusalem and built a model depicting its siege (Ezek. 4:1–3). To represent the length of punishment of Israel and Judah, respectively, he was bound with cords and lay on his left side for 390 days and on his right side for forty days (Ezek. 4:4–8). During that first period, he consumed only rationed food and water to symbolize the plight of those left in Jerusalem (Ezek. 4:9–17). He also cut his hair, divided it into thirds and disposed of it in three different manners, to indicate the ways in which the inhabitants of Jerusalem would perish (Ezek. 5:1–12). Ezekiel's actions served to reinforce the message he had been given from God.

8:7–18 Here God reveals to Ezekiel the incredible depths of idolatry being practiced even within His temple. The animal worship (Ezek. 8:10–12) may have been Egyptian in origin. "Tammuz" (Ezek. 8:14) was an Assyrian fertility god, and weeping for him was supposed to bring him back from the dead. The sun was worshiped (Ezek. 8:16) in both Egypt (as Ra or Amon–Ra) and in the Semitic nations (as Shamash). The "branch to their nose" (Ezek. 8:17) may refer to obscene rituals associated with the worship of Asherah or Ishtar. The ignorance of the elders of Israel is shown in that they thought they could hide their idolatry from God's sight as if they were in a dark room (Ezek. 8:12). A corresponding prophecy can be found in Zephaniah 1:12, ". . . at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles . . . ."

12:21–25 This proverb spoken by God revealed the lack of faith in God among the people of Israel. The problem was not that the visions were failing, but that the Jews were given prophecies about destruction they did not want to hear. The only visions that they accepted were those that promised peace and were proclaimed by the false prophets (cf. 13:2–10, 16). In the New Testament, Peter warned that there would also be scoffers in the last days who would deny Jesus' Second Coming (2 Pet. 3:3, 4).

5 But if a man be just, and do that*which*is*lawful and right, 18:1–32 One of the distinctive features of the Book of Ezekiel is the presentation of individual responsibility (Ezek. 3:16–21; 14:12–20; 18:1–32; 33:1–20). In this passage the Lord was setting aside an old proverb in Israel (Ezek. 18:2, cf. Jer. 31:29, 30; Lam. 5:7) and replacing it with one of His own: "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezek. 18:4, 20). In the Old Testament, God's people were treated as a national unit, and their material existence and prosperity was often affected by the sins of the minority (cf. Josh. 7:1, 4–11, 18–26). Consequently, God was just when He spoke of "visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children" (Ex. 20:5). This passage, however, looks beyond material ramifications, and considers the eternal results of sin. This is implied by the use of the term "soul" and the command to "make you a new heart and a new spirit" (Ezek. 18:31). Many righteous people were going to die in the siege, and many would be carried to Babylon (as Ezekiel and Daniel were). God wanted His people to understand that the ultimate fate of each person was determined by his or her individual relationship to Him.
